HEARST REQUESTED TO LEAVE FRANCE; EXPOSE OF TREATY IS BLAMED

Publisher Accepts His Banishment Philosophically

PARIS, Sept. 2.—The Paris newspapers today announced that William Randolph Hearst had left Paris yesterday for London as the result of a foreign office request that he leave French soil.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—William Randolph Hearst issued the following statement here today:

"I have no complaint to make. The officials were extremely polite. They said I was an enemy of France and a danger in their midst. They made me feel quite important."

"They said I could stay in France a little while longer if I desired, that they would take a chance on nothing disastrous happening to the republic."

"But I told them that I did not want to take the responsibility of endangering the great French nation; that America had saved it once during the war, and I would save it again by leaving."

"Furthermore, I was like the man who was told that he was going blind, and who said he did not mind, as he had seen everything anyhow."

"Similarly, I had seen everything in France, including some very interesting governmental performances."

"Then I asked Mr. Tardieu's emissary to express to Mr. Tardieu my immense admiration at his amazing alertness in protecting France from the peril of invasion, and we parted with quite elaborate politeness."

"It was a little bit foolish, but extremely French."

"The reason for the strained relations—to use a proper diplomatic term—was the publication of the secret Anglo-French treaty two years ago by the Hearst newspapers, which upset some international 'appreciations,' but informed the American people; and of course that being the reason, the French government was entirely right in leveling its attack at me, and quite wrong in its action towards Mr. Horan, who was only my agent."

"I think, however, that the general attitude of the Hearst press in opposing the entrance of the United States into the League of Nations, or any protective pacts to involve our country in the quarrels of European powers, is mainly responsible."

"Also, there might have been some slight irritation at the occasional intimations in our papers that France, now being the richest nation in the world, might use some of the German indemnity to pay her honest debts to America, especially because if it had not been for America she would now be paying indemnity instead of receiving it."

"If being a competent journalist and a loyal American makes a man persona non grata in France, I think I can endure the situation without loss of sleep."

"In fact, the whole affair reminds me of the story of the rather effeminate young man who went to call on his best girl and found her in the arms of another young fellow."

"The effeminate youth went into the hall, took up his successful rival's umbrella, broke it and said: 'Now I hope it rains!'"

"You see, for the French national policy of 'revanche' to be completely successful, we will have to have rain."

(Signed)
"William Randolph Hearst."

BANDITS GET $7,000 LOOT

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 2.—Three masked bandits ambushed a proprietor of a chain of candy stores and his wife and niece near their home in west Philadelphia today and obtained more than $7,000 in cash and jewelry.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence S. Maizer and Miss Adele Britton, the victims, had stopped in front of the Maizer garage when the bandits appeared at the door of the Maizer auto, flourishing revolvers. Jewelry valued at about $7,000 was taken from the women and a ring and $100 in cash were taken from Maizer.

The bandits fled in an auto bearing New Jersey license plates.

SPRING IS HERE

PORTSMOUTH, O., Sept. 2.—For the second time this season, two cherry trees are in full bloom today on the farm of A. T. Pack, real-estate broker, near South Portsmouth, Ky.

After blooming early, the trees completely withered during the drought and were thought, for a time, to be dead.

BELIEVE BALLOONS CONTINUE ALOFT IN BENNETT CUP RACES

One Is Sighted Over Syracuse; 20,000 See Take-Off

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 2.—One of the six balloons in the Gordon Bennett international balloon race was sighted at 7 a. m. today as it sailed over this city, it was flying southeastward.

Some time later it was reported over Cortland, N. Y.

Identification of the bag was prevented by weather conditions. The balloon was flying at about 2,000 feet.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 2.—The skies and capricious winds above Lake Erie early today apparently held the secret of the fate of the six balloons that took off from Cleveland airport late yesterday under threatening weather conditions in the nineteenth race of the Gordon Bennett international balloon trophy.

Southwesterly winds blew the crafts out of sight of Cleveland yesterday over the edge of the lake and last reports indicated that most of them were heading toward the St. Lawrence River valley.

Two balloons were sighted out over the lake early today by coast guards, who because of clouds, were unable to identify the bags. Within an hour after the crafts were last reported seen, a terrific rain and wind storm, accompanied by lightning, broke over the region.

A report that a balloon was seen falling in Lake Erie at about 9 o'clock last night sent two coast guard cutters in search for the craft. The lake was thoroughly scoured but no trace of the balloon was found. Captain John Daly of the Cleveland Coast Guard station, discounted the report.

Nearly 20,000 persons saw the take-off of the six balloons. The event climaxed a full day of unique aerial activities reminiscent of last year's national air races.

C. G. Andrus, chief of the Cleveland airport weather bureau, said this morning that the probable course of the balloons would be generally toward Toronto, Ont. He said that at the prevailing wind velocity the balloons should arrive in that region this morning.

BROTHER FOUND

News of the finding of the bodies of Salomon August Andree, balloonist explorer, and his polar flight companions has been of more than passing interest to Eric Strindberg, Portsmouth, O., architect, above. He is a brother of Nils Strindberg, who was a member of the ill-fated expedition.

POSTPONED EVENTS HELD AT CLEVELAND ON MONDAY PROGRAM

Attempt New Parachute Record; Youth Will Make Attempt

CLEVELAND, Sept. 2.—With the six competitive balloons in the nineteenth Gordon Bennett international classic well on their way in quest of the championship trophy after being given a rousing sendoff last night, air enthusiasts here today turned their attention to the completion of the aeronautical carnival being held in connection with the ballooning event.

The events on the carnival program today were to have been held on Sunday, but were postponed because of inclement weather with a complete day's program slated, the aerial exhibitions were to begin at 10 a. m.

An attempt to break the world's altitude record for parachute jumping was the highlight on the program. The record seeker is Edvard Ballash, 17-year-old Cleveland youth, who planned to ascend to a height of 25,000 feet, or nearly five miles, before stepping from his plane for the drop to the ground.

Another feature of considerable importance was the proposed attempt of Mrs. Blanche Wilcox Noyes, noted woman flyer, to better her own record for airplane spins. Defying death at every turn, Mrs. Noyes yesterday set the first official world's record for spins to be made by a woman flyer. She turned eleven spins in twenty seconds in setting the mark.

Wally Franklin and Jack O'Mear were to battle for glider honors and an exhibition with a 1910 model "pusher" plane was to be given by Dewey Noyes, in other parts of the program. Several stunt flying and formation exhibitions also were scheduled.

ADmits MURDER OF WIFE; STABS SELF

CLEVELAND, Sept. 2.—Sobbing that he "could not bear to lose her," George Olteam, 43, today admitted after several hours of questioning, that he stabbed to death his wife, Mrs. Filma Olteam, young Rumanian dressmaker, as she sat chatting in the home of a friend here last night.

Olteam was arrested early this morning. He had a four-inch self-inflicted knife wound in his neck. Olteam was first identified as the murderer of his wife by Mrs. Marie Monia, with whom Mrs. Olteam was visiting at the time of the crime. Later, under pressure of police questioning, he broke down and confessed the killing.

START NEW STATE BUILDING SOON

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 2.—Announcement that the actual work of constructing the new state office building here will begin about October first was made today.

The contract for general construction work is expected to be awarded at the next meeting of the state office building commission. The commissioners are scheduled to convene September 22.

TREASURY BALANCE

REMOVE REMAINS OF ANDREE PARTY FROM VESSEL AT TROMSOE

Refute Reports That Bodies Intact; Log Is Important

TROMSOE, Norway, Sept. 2.—Salomon August Andree came back to his starting point today, a little fishing village from which he sailed with two companions thirty-three years ago to trust his fate to a swinging balloon in the hope of reaching the top of the world.

The venture failed, but in death the adventurers remained triumphant. World honors awaited the tiny whaler Bratvaag as it sailed into the harbor today, bearing at least that part of the polar heroes which thirty-three winters of ice and snow failed to wear away.

Lying silent on the forward deck of the vessel, the bones of Andree, Nils Strindberg and Knut Frankel face the hillside where three decades previous the daring Swedes completed preparations for their fantastic flight in a gasbag from Spitzbergen to the North Pole or where the winds would carry them.

Dr. Gunnar Horn, leader of an Arctic expedition which stumbled upon the remains of the Andree camp on White Island, carefully supervised removal from the vessel of the remains of the explorers—two unrecognizable skeletons and a pile of bones. He was emphatic in explaining that previous reports to the effect that the bodies were found in a nearly perfect state of preservation were erroneous.

Andree's body, he stated, was identified by a coat button bearing an insignia and by the fact that his small diary was found in the vestpocket. The headbones were broken. The second skeleton

LABOR DAY TRAFFIC CLAIMS FIVE LIVES

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 2.—Five Ohioans lost their lives in traffic accidents Labor Day, a check-up by International News Service revealed today, showing an unusual low holiday toll for the state.

The most tragic accident occurred near Moraine City, south of Dayton, when two women and a 2-year-old boy were killed beneath the wheels of a Cincinnati and Lake Erie Express traction car.

The victim was Mrs. Edna Hayburn, 24, of Trimble, Athens County; her baby son, Ernest Hayburn, Jr., and Miss Flossie Hayburn, 18, of Jacksonville, O., her sister-in-law.

Ernest Hayburn, husband of the dead woman, was critically injured. He is in a Middletown hospital where physicians held little hope for his recovery.

The Hayburn automobile was struck by the traction car at a crossing late yesterday.

WATCHMAN SLAIN BY PLANT ROBBERS

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 2.—Charles Widrier, 64-year-old night watchman employed by the Tunnel Glue Co., was brutally murdered early today when he surprised a group of prowlers in the act of looting the plant.

The man's body was found by Joseph Day, private operative for a burglar alarm system, when Day went out to investigate Widrier's failure to turn in his regular calls.

Widrier's head had been crushed by heavy blows inflicted when he struggled with the burglars. Only a small amount of cash had been obtained from the company's safe by the watchman's slayers.

CHICAGO RIVER FRONT FIRE LOSS $1,000,000

CHICAGO, Sept. 2.—Eight successive explosions of gasoline and oil tanks caused a river front fire here which was brought under control today only after a damage estimated at $1,000,000 had been wrought to warehouses and manufacturing plants.

Fighting the conflagration from both land and water, one half of the city's fire-fighting apparatus was called into play before the blaze was subdued this morning.

"LEGS" DIAMOND, ARRESTED IN GERMANY, WILL BE DEPORTED

BERLIN, Sept. 2.—Jack "Legs" Diamond, New York underworld king, will continue his interrupted tour through Germany to the coast frontier and out of the country under police escort, it was indicated today.

Informing that the gangster was being held by Aix-La-Chapelle police pending extradition request from the United States, authorities here pointed out that according to a request would be impossible because that extradition treaty negotiated between the United States and Germany has not been ratified.

Diamond, it was expected, will be taken to the frontier and expelled.

AIX LA CHAPPELLE, Germany, Sept. 2.—Debonair Jack "Legs" Diamond of New York, underworld fashion plate sojourning in Europe for an unexplained reason and after adept evasion of American port authorities, felt the iron grip of the German police today.

Informing that one of America's prize gangsters was sighted in the vicinity of the German border after being gracefully escorted there by Belgian officials following his debarcation from the Red Star liner Belgenland, police quickly tracked down the nonchalant "Legs" and held him for possible extradition request by the American embassy.

Diamond's ingenuity, developed to the fullest in the hazardous exploits that befall the lot of the racketeer, was fully demonstrated to the German police. They were astounded to find that he already had outwitted the trained border officials of the first station, slipping quietly into Germany.

Traveling under his own passport and correct name, he took a slow train instead of an express and very nearly evaded searchers altogether. But the hand of the law tapped him on the shoulder before many hours.

Escorted to police headquarters, Diamond upset the usual rigidly formal atmosphere of the German police station and immediately became the object of frank curiosity. Dressed in a smart grey suit and light felt hat, he accepted arrest as nonchalantly as he lit his cigarettes.

German police authorities admitted that they arrested Diamond without official request from the United States but solely on the basis of newspaper reports that he was wanted in New York.

He spent the night in a cell in the city jail.

FEARS WIFE DEAD SO SHOTS SELF

WAUSEON, O., Sept. 2.—Suffering from a self-inflicted bullet wound in his chest, Floyd Hinkle, 49, farmer, is in Memorial Hospital here today.

Under the false impression that he had killed his wife during a quarrel at their farm home, a mile east of Swanton, Hinkle turned a shotgun upon himself. Mrs. Hinkle, however, had fainted and fell to the floor uninjured.

COSTE AND BELLONTE MAINTAIN FAST TIME APPROACHING SHORE

Cheered By Islanders Off Upper Canada; Radio Says Plane "O. K."; Expected To Reach New York Early Tuesday Evening.

CHATHAM, Mass., Sept. 2.—The trans-Atlantic French biplane, Question Mark, was pointed toward Canso, N. S., shortly after 9 o'clock (EDT) according to intercepted messages picked up by the Radio Marine Corporation of America's station here.

The local radio station was not in direct touch with the French birdmen but the radio messages heard indicated, station officials said, that everything was okay with the plane.

At 8:47 a. m. (EDT) the Question Mark was talking with the Western Union cable ship Lord Kelvin off the upper Canadian coast. No position was given.

No other shore station along the New England coast had heard the Question Mark as far as could be learned.

By INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE
Captain Dieudonne Coste, the "D'Artagnan of Aviation," had almost within his grasp today the supreme prize of his hazardous profession—the first successful non-stop flight from Paris to New York.

While the St. Pierre Miquelon islanders were finishing breakfast, the dashing Frenchman, accompanied by Maurice Bellonte, roared over their heads in his huge Red plane "Question Mark," shooting towards Halifax and New York at an estimated 100-miles-an-hour speed. The plane was sighted at 7 a. m. Eastern daylight time.

The simple islanders who so often listened in vain for the hum of an expected trans-Atlantic flyer cheered until their throats were hoarse, fully realizing that they were witnessing a feat certain to be recorded in the annals of history.

Not since smiling young Lindbergt lifted his "Spirit of St. Louis" into the air in New York in 1927 and landed on LeBourget Field in Paris some thirty-three hours later, has such wide significance become attached to an ocean flight.

The Question Mark was sighted at 7 o'clock, lifting itself suddenly

MARINE FLYER RACE VICTIM

CHICAGO, Sept. 2.—Aviation's aristocracy adjourned the 1930 national air races here today, sorrowed by the death of Captain Arthur H. Page, 35, United States Marine Corps ace whose plane crashed during the Thompson trophy race yesterday while traveling at a 205-mile-an-hour clip.

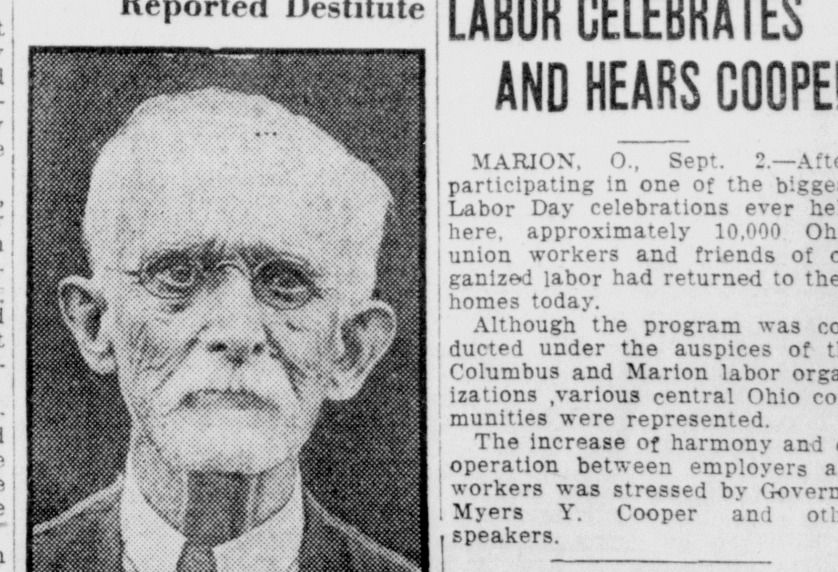

Participants in the speed classic which Captain Page was leading at the time of his crash agreed today that the Marine Corps flyer died in a successful attempt to prevent his big Curtiss Hawk from plunging into the crowded grandstands.

Leading the rest of the field by almost an entire lap, Captain Page's engine sputtered and died as he was rounding the first pylon. He veered sharply off the course, avoiding the crowds, but his plane struck the ground before he could swing it completely around for a safe landing. Captain Page had an altitude of only 100 feet.

Deacon Litz, of Dubois, Pa., piloting a Dusenber, flashed across the finish line of the huge wooden saucer to finish second, followed closely by Shorty Cantlon, of Akron, O., in his Miller-Shofield.

Arnold's win gave him 139 points and increased his season total to 1,027. Cantlon, his nearest rival for the 1930 A. A. championship, garnered 104 points by placing third and increased his season total to 984.

Daniel Webster's Kin Reported Destitute

ELDRIDGE PERRY, 79, of Groveland, Mass., claims to be a relative of the famous Daniel Webster. Both he and his wife, who is totally blind, are facing removal to the town farm because of their poverty stricken circumstances. Mrs. Perry is said to be a niece of former President Franklin Pierce, the nation's only President from New Hampshire.

Although the program was conducted under the auspices of the Columbus and Marion labor organizations, various central Ohio communities were represented.

The increase of harmony and co-operation between employers and workers was stressed by Governor Myers Y. Cooper and other speakers.

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—Opening price quotations for Liberty Bonds today were: Liberty 3 1/2's 101 1/2, first 4 1/2's 102 1/2, and liberty fourth 4 1/2's 102 3/4.

KILLED BY TRAIN

CLEVELAND, Sept. 2.—A middle-aged woman who was instantly killed by a speeding passenger train here last night, was identified at County Morgue today as Mrs. Anna Krsink, 37, of Cleveland. The woman is said to have stood calmly on the track and waited for the train to strike her. Police, however, reported her death as accidental.

THREE PERSONS ARE INJURED IN TRIPLE COLLISION ON PIKE

Three persons, two women and one man, were injured, none seriously, in a triple automobile collision on the Columbus Pike near Wilberforce, three miles east of Xenia, Monday afternoon.

A punctured wheel of the left shoulder was sustained by Robert Frank, 25, of Rochester, Mich., driver of a small roadster which was reported to have sideswiped two cars traveling west on the highway. Mrs. A. L. Kline, Pittsburg, Pa., suffered severe cuts above and below the left eye from flying glass, and Mrs. Charles Olmhausen, Columbus, received a severe scalp wound.

The crash victims were removed, one in the J. H. Whitmer undertaker ambulance, to McClellan Hospital where it was said, after physicians had administered medical treatment, all the injured would be able to leave the hospital Tuesday. Frank left the hospital Monday.

The two injured women were occupants of the same machine, which also contained their husbands and other relatives, while two other occupants of Frank's car were unhurt.

SCHOOLGIRL, 13, GAINS 21 POUNDS; KONJOLA DID IT

Mother Pays Grateful Tribute To New Medicine: "Wish Other Mothers To Know," She Says

"Konjola is indeed a medicine for all the family," said Mrs. Mary Reed, 214 Wade Street, Cincinnati, mother of Miss Emma Million. "My daughter, Emma, was weak and did not play like other children. She was bilious, her eyes were dull, and she suffered intensely from constipation. Her kidneys were weak and her liver sluggish. She was often taken ill at school and lost much time from her studies.

"Emma gained 21 pounds since I began giving her Konjola. It has been eighteen months since I gave her this medicine and she is in perfect health today. She began to improve rapidly with the treatment. Constipation disappeared, she was no longer bilious, and she began to romp and play as a healthy child should. The weak fainting spells soon passed and her eyes began to sparkle with health. Konjola will always have a place in my home."

The wonderful works of Konjola are not restricted to any age. It may be taken by young or old with amazing results. A trial of from six to eight weeks is recommended for the best results.

Konjola is a new and different medicine of 32 ingredients. 22 of them the juices of roots and herbs long known for their medicinal value. Konjola works quickly and thoroughly at the very root, the fount of the ills of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, and of rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness. Konjola is not designed to give mere temporary relief, but to bring new, glorious and lasting health.

Konjola is sold in Xenia, Ohio at the Gallaher Drug Store and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

HAPPY DAYS GONE

SCHOOL days are here again. It is estimated that more than 2,000 pupils of Xenia's public schools returned to their study books Tuesday morning at the re-convening of schools for the fall term, bringing to an end the summer vacation period which lasted three months.

St. Brigid Parochial school pupils will not return to school, however, until Monday, September 8.

AMERICA'S DIET CHANGING

Physical Exertion Indicator To Food Variety

The amount of physical activity is an index to the variety of food to be eaten. To retain youth's figure and equanimity, eat only what is earned by physical exertion.

This message has been so often repeated to the American public that it has actually changed the diet of the country.

"Menus are being planned, especially for those who do not consume much physical energy. In contrast to heavy, rich foods, fattening for those not burning the energy produced, the country is now using more fruits, vegetables, and dairy products."

"The long drawn out dinners of grandmother's day with their heavy puddings, intricate sauces and heavily spiced meats are quite definitely in the background. Spending the whole evening at the table eating is as old fashioned as the stage coach."

"It is my belief that we are now eating to live instead of living to eat."

"This change in diet has resulted in two things: greater consumption of fruits, vegetables and dairy products and a greater necessity for refrigeration."

"Chilled salads, dainty desserts and crisp vegetables, included in this new diet, must be kept cold. The cold, dry temperature must be maintained at all times for many foods are extremely perishable."

"The quality and preservation of food in storage and in transportation is safeguarded by the government, but when it gets to the ultimate consumer, in most cases, it is left entirely to chance."

"The government is highly interested in the production of milk. Bulletins have been issued by the United States Department of Agriculture stating that milk, to be kept fresh, must be properly refrigerated at a temperature below fifty degrees. At a higher temperature, bacteria will multiply rapidly and spoil the milk."

The following is a test conducted by the New York City Department of Health.

"Fifteen drops of grade A milk were obtained under the best possible conditions and were found to contain only 3000 bacteria. Within twenty-four hours, in a temperature of 50 degrees, the bacterial count became 11,500. When raised to sixty degrees, the bacterial count was 180,000 and at eighty-six degrees the count increased to 1,400,000,000."

"These figures mean a great deal, when it is remembered that the bacterial count in milk is the best index of its general sanitary condition."

"The condition of the food we eat is concerning us more today than it was a few years ago. This fact, perhaps account for the tremendous acceptance of household electric refrigerators. As a means of keeping foods crisp and fresh, a modern electric refrigerator cannot be equalled. Not only will it keep food fresh and in safe condition for the table, but it places a large variety of new and appetizing frozen desserts at one's command."

ENDS LIFE MONDAY WITH PISTOL SHOT; BLAME ILL HEALTH

Suicide, due to despondency because of ill health, was the verdict of Coroner R. L. Haines, Jamestown, following his investigation into the death of Abraham Miller, 14, who fired a bullet from a .38 caliber revolver through his right temple in his bedroom at the home of his brother, J. H. Miller on a farm on the Osborn-Dayton Road, west of Osborn at 7:30 a. m. Monday.

Members of the family informed Coroner Haines the aged man had previously made threats to commit suicide. They said he had been suffering from a stomach disorder and that he complained of being ill when he arose Monday morning.

Declaring "never mind" when the family offered to fix him a dose of soda, Miller returned to his bedroom, seated himself on the floor against a wall, propped a blanket back of his head and fired a bullet through his head from a revolver the family did not know he possessed, the coroner was told. The shot awakened his brother, who was asleep in an adjoining room, but the man had died instantly.

He is survived by three brothers, J. H. Miller, Dan Miller and Ruben Miller, and two sisters, Mrs. Barbara Myers, Dayton, and Mrs. J. C. Lessel, New Carlisle, O.

Funeral services will be conducted at the Morris and Sons funeral home at Osborn Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment will be made in the Mennonite Cemetery at Osborn.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

USE OR LOSE — Whosoever hath, to him shall be given, and he shall have more abundance; but whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken away even that he hath. — Matthew 13:12.

LAWLESS AMERICA

George W. Wickersham, head of the president's law enforcement commission, recently made some remarks on the unwillingness of the American people to obey the laws. His commission will in due time make some suggestions.

Meanwhile we all know about how far the laws will go, if people do not feel like obeying them, and if no effort is made to enforce them. You may post a perfectly reasonable notice on every road in Ohio fixing speed limits for automobiles. But if no one is brought into court for violating that notice, almost anyone who desires to travel at a faster rate will do so.

One may deplore this tendency and say that people ought to obey the laws. Yet they have always had this strong tendency. They seem to have inherited it from the days when the English government tried to order them around. When they began to tax tea and other things, the independent minded colonists threw the tea into Boston harbor. Their descendants are still active.

So we have a mountain of laws that are not well obeyed. The majority are good and useful laws, and would improve things if they were adhered to. But our independent people often refuse to consider what would be for the good of the community. They claim to know better than the lawmakers as to what is good for them. They do as they like until some officer comes around and invites them to interview the judge. After which their views frequently change. And of course legislators are human and often pass laws that are wrong and can never be enforced.

Two things are necessary to make the law respected. First, make it so just and reasonable that rational people will see its fairness and respect it. Second, insist that public officers and police officials enforce the laws to the limit of their ability, and if they are unable to do so, let someone else try it.

STATES VS NATION

The states of our union were earnestly advised by Charles E. Hughes, former secretary of state, to resist encroachment by the national government on their authority. This raises the question, which has always caused controversy, as to how far the states should have the right of local self government and management of their own affairs.

There have been many demands to have the federal government handle problems where it is claimed that state authority is inadequate. It is often argued that the states are not powerful enough to promote the progress of needed social reforms.

Progressive people have seen various good causes going ahead slowly under state government. They have argued that the strong central power at Washington could get useful things done, where if these things are left to 48 different state governments, the movement would be neglected in many of them.

Against this idea is the fact that the federal government has too many things to look after now. Congress is so burdened with its work, that each year it can act on only a small part of the problems presented to it. The citizens of various states may present serious grievances, but congress may not get around to take any action.

The state governments are different. If they fail to remedy the grievances of their people, the state capital is close at hand. The citizens get busy and they control the action of their legislature. In a country of 48 different states, where ideas and conditions differ radically, different arrangements must often be made.

There are many questions which the federal government is forced to handle, because the states are not able to cope with them. But taking a problem out of the control of a state, and giving it over to the remote and less accessible federal government, may do more harm than good.

The WAY of the WORLD

By GROVE PATTERSON

WHAT IS AGE?

It's more fun to go sailing through the sky at 72 than to be laid on the shelf. So says Dr. Elwood Mead, commissioner of reclamation, who will supervise the great Boulder dam project on the Colorado river. Dr. Mead will sail over the chasm in a balloon and make final notations for the project. It must be great to be 72 and going as strong as ever. This man supervised the installation of Australia's irrigation system. He has served as reclamation adviser to many governments. The refusal to recognize age is probably the greatest factor in keeping young.

PUBLIC OPINION

People read billboards and cheap fiction magazines too much and newspapers not enough. They read too many books that are trash and not enough books that seek to explain life, people and events. Pollard, governor of Virginia, speaking at the University of Virginia Institute of Public Affairs, tells his hearers that the future of democracy depends largely on the steady growth of an informed public opinion, based on facts and not on prejudices as to both measures and men.

The habit of reading newspapers will bring about an informed public opinion. Without an informed public opinion there is little hope.

LUXURIES AND WARS

Nobody is much impressed when Dean Inge says Americans spend enough for luxuries in two years to pay the British war debt. What if they do? Happy is the nation that has more money to spend for luxuries than for war. Let's see that we always do have.

WOMEN AND STAMPS

Martha Washington's face has been taken off the four-cent stamp and that of William Howard Taft put on. Women write to Washington, vigorously protesting. Only two other women ever had their faces on stamps—Isabelle, Queen of Spain, whose face adorned a stamp issued in 1893 and Pocahontas in 1907. After all, that's very little to worry about.

LIVING WORDS

The National congress of India adopts a declaration of independence which uses much of the American Declaration of Independence, word for word. Who says words don't count, don't live, don't serve for all time? Uttered in a righteous cause they survive kingdoms.

THE QUESTION BOX

CENTRAL PRESS WASHINGTON BUREAU

Answers to questions of information and fact can be obtained by writing to Central Press Bureau, P. O. Box 126 Washington, D. C., and enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope. No answers will be given to marital, medical or legal questions.

Is John Held, Jr., the artist, a son of Anna Held, the famous actress?

No. They are not related.

Berton Braley

Wehre does Berton Braley, the poet and author, reside? Berton Braley is now living at South Norwalk, Conn.

Work In South America

Please inform me how to obtain employment in South America? You should communicate with the oil, fruit, tea and coffee, mining and steamship companies which have operations there and employ persons for the kind of work you seek.

State of Franklin

Was there ever a state in the United States named Franklin? Yes. The state of Franklin was originally the name of what is now Tennessee.

World War Poster

During the World war there was a poster used by the Red Cross entitled the "Greatest Mother of All." Can you tell me whether this was an actual photograph and if so, of whom?

The war poster you referred to was an actual photograph of Marguerite Fontre, singer.

Egyptian Pyramids

How were the pyramids of Egypt built when even the present day lifting machinery is inadequate to lift stones of the weight found in some of them?

This question has puzzled many generations. As no records have been left to prove how they were built, it is only a matter of conjecture. The weight of authority is that the stones were dragged up long incline planes by hundreds and thousands of slaves belonging to the Pharaohs.

Telephoning Ships

Is it possible to telephone to ships at sea? Yes. The Leviathan has had a ship to shore radio telephone service for about one year. Other installations have followed.

Greatest Engineering Feat

What is regarded as America's greatest engineering project? Your question is controversial. Many regard the construction of the Hudson tubes under the Hudson river at New York City, as having been the greatest engineering project up to that time. The credit for this project belongs to William Gibbs McAdoo, former secretary of the treasury. These tubes were followed by those of the Pennsylvania railroad and the New York-New Jersey vehicular tunnel.

Tallest Building

Is the Woolworth building the tallest one in the world? No. There are two buildings in New York much higher, the Chrysler and the Bank of Manhattan. The Empire State building now being constructed in New York will be approximately 1,300 feet above the street. An observation gallery will be constructed almost a quarter of a mile above the first story.

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK. — The young men in the cigarette ads had better take a little time off and devote it to a study of Emily Post.

I encountered one of them on the rear piazza of a recent magazine—nice chap, who smokes the same brand I do; but very ill bred. His hostess extends a cigarette case.

"Have a 'Smellycremo,'" she says. "Thank you, no," the young man replies. "I smoke 'Unfortunates'."

MOVIE MANNERS

Speaking of breeding, there's a dinner scene in the film, "Raffles." The women retire to the drawing room leaving the men with their cigars. Ronald Coleman, playing the role of the Gentleman Crackman, arises with the others, bows to his hostess and the instant she passes, cut across the bow of the next woman in line without even a hint of an apology.

I saw the picture with Longacre Lil. She turned to me: "Isn't that bad taste?" she inquired.

"It may be 'bad taste' Lil," I replied, "but after all, who is there out in Hollywood to wise them up, except Elinor Glyn?"

LINE OF CLEAVAGE SEPARATES STAND PATS AND PROGRESSIVES IN BOTH POLITICAL PARTIES

CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON—Many people have the idea that a progressive Republican really is a Democrat—or just a bad—or good—depending on the politics of the individual harboring the idea.

It would clarify matters if this mistake were corrected.

There are stand-pat and progressive Democrats. A stand-pat Republican may consider the stand-pat Democratic crowd safer folk to associate with than his progressive fellow Republicans. A progressive Democrat may like his progressive Republican acquaintances' views better than his affiliated stand-pat Democrats'.

Nevertheless, a line of cleavage runs all the way through, between the two parties.

UNDOUBTEDLY great numbers of Americans cast votes and even hold high offices, as Republicans or Democrats, without any actual thought of this cleavage, but simply because of some inherited preference, or for geographical reasons, or purely by accident.

A few of the intelligentsia, however, know the difference.

To illustrate:

James A. Reed, when in the senate, fought the Republican organization bitterly, but he always showed a high regard and a deep respect for the G. O. P. progressive group, and I rather got the impression that he classed them as belonging, in effect, to his own party—until, one day, I happened to be interviewing him. He had been giving the Republicans hail Columbia, yet I imagined he did not mean to include the insurgent element.

Finally I asked him—"How about the Republican progressives?"

"Honest men on the wrong side," he answered promptly.

ON THE OTHER HAND:

Senator George H. Moses is as ultra a stand-pat as the G. O. P. has in the upper house of congress.

Senator George W. Norris is the progressives' leader.

For all that, Moses, as Republican senatorial campaign chairman is positively embarrassing in his determination to aid "Uncle George" in this year's fight in Nebraska. Norris evidently wants no hurt help, probably fearing it will hurt him with Nebraska's progressive voters. His Democratic rival, ex-Senator Hitchcock, is free from a lot of the heresies that Moses shudders in Norris. Never mind—Norris, basically, is a Republican, and when it comes to a showdown between a Republican and a Democrat, Moses is for the former.

TRUE, President Hoover (if his spokesmen interpret him correctly) is cool toward Senator Norris.

But old guard Republicans were free to assert, before the Kansas City convention (they ceased to do so immediately after the nomination there), that Mr. Hoover's G. O. P. principles were not founded on rock.

Besides, if the White House continues balky in the Norris matter, it threatens to create an awkward situation, for most of the Republican higher-ups seem resolved to stand by "Uncle George" anyway, as witness Senator Moses' attitude.

Also Senator Capper's whose Topeka capital has declared the Nebraska progressive's re-election "of the utmost importance to the people of his state and the country as well."

THE LATE VICTOR BERGER, while a representative from Wisconsin, unquestionably furnished the most illuminating explanation ever given of Republican progressivism's relationship to the total body of Republicanism.

"It is the elephant's tail," said the Milwaukee socialist, "a sore tail and it makes the elephant sore, yet an integral part of the elephant."

In his own party primaries the elephant may be exceedingly anxious to have the soreness nominally out of his caudal supplement.

But failing that, sore or not, he strenuously objects to having it amputated on election day.

MENU HINT

Barbecue Steak Sandwiches
Potato Chips Sliced Tomatoes
Celery

Watermelon Cocoanut Cup Cakes
Coffee Lemonade

Outdoor cooking is very fascinating, especially in the early fall. Try this menu cooked in an outdoor oven or over coals of a bonfire.

Today's Recipes

Barbecue Steak Sandwiches—

Four or five pounds porterhouse or sirloin steak, one pound sliced bacon, two and one-half dozen buns, one-half pound butter. Have steak cut in suitable pieces for buns. Split and butter buns. (Amounts given serve ten.) When the fire has ceased to blaze, leaving a good bed of red coals, fry bacon in a frying pan. Remove from pan and keep warm. Now have bacon fat sizzling hot and sear each piece of steak quickly on each side. Then lay steaks on grill and broil, turn frequently and sprinkle with salt. Sear in the hot fat before broiling prevents juice dripping out. When done to your liking put between split buns with a slice of bacon and a spoonful of barbecue sauce.

Barbecue Sauce—One-half cup butter, two onions, chopped, two green peppers, chopped, one cup tomato sauce, one teaspoon chop suey sauce, one-half teaspoon salt. Saute onions and pepper in butter till onions are yellow. Add other ingredients are bring to a boil. Serve hot or cold.

Suggestions

Macaroni Products
Macaroni products are made of farina and contain a high percentage of gluten. They furnish an abundance of the proteins or repair materials which counteract the wear and tear of work and play, and mineral salts on which depend the quality of the blood, the beat of the heart and the ready response of nerves and muscles to every impulse.

They contain magnesium, phosphorus, potassium, chlorine and sulfur. There's the calcium, sodium and iron present as well. And though these impressive names may have a little technical meaning to the homemaker their presence or lack of it in the diet of her children may mean the difference between robust and joyous health and that passive state which is neither sickness nor health.

The wheaty goodness of macaroni combines with meats, fish, shellfish, cheese, eggs, nuts, mushrooms or vegetables into "one-dish meals," which provide well-balanced menus with the least possible time spent in the kitchen.

Macaroni, spaghetti, elbow macaroni or egg noodles may be used as a change from potatoes, wherever the latter would fit in—creamed, fried, plain with butter or gravy, or in salad. There is literally no end of uses of this adaptable food.

Peter's Adventures

By Mrs. Florence Smith Vincent

THE THREE WHO BORROWED TROUBLE

THE ANTS were warm and weary. Their dusky coats were covered with dust. And at first sight Peter judged they were not in good temper.

"Thank goodness we are back at last!" grumbled one of them, crossly. "I can't understand why we had to move so far away. A spot nearer the old home would have been just as good as the one chosen. That's the trouble with our surveyors. When they go searching for a location they never stop to think of the distance. What a walk we've had!"

"The worst is yet to come!" sighed the grumbling Ant's companion. "We crawled back home with our claws empty. The return trip will seem twice as far when we have to make it bearing the eggs to our new quarters."

A third Ant-voice took up the complaint.

"And as if all this were not bad enough, we have moved so far away from our old home that we shall be worrying always about our dairy, wondering if it is safe or if harm has come to it. The chances are that our fine herd of cows will be stolen by an enemy tribe if we leave them unprotected. And I should like to know how we can spare enough guards to protect them by night and by day as they must be protected if nothing is to happen. Yes, mam, hark my words! We shall have to spend a lot of time and take a heap of trouble to find new stock unless we can coax our old cows into new pastures. And you know as well as I do, sisters, once our cows become used to certain feeding grounds they hate to leave them."

"Dear me, I never thought of that," wailed the two other Ants in chorus. That certainly means more hard work for us-laying paths, cutting weeds, herding the cattle!"

Let Doctor Test Ears Of Pupils

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Next to vision, hearing is the most important thing to measure for the school child.

Just as in the case of defective vision, defective hearing may go unrecognized, and this situation leads to the belief that the child is mentally incompetent.

One of the commonest causes of defective hearing is a simple thing—the plugging up of the external ear canal with wax. It is surprising how often this goes unsuspected for a long time and leads to a considerable amount of disability. Removal of the wax is, of course, relatively easy, though it should always be done by a physician, who knows the anatomy of the external ear-drums and will avoid injuring the ear canal. As a well known New York specialist used to say, the only thing it is safe for a person to put in his own right ear, is his left elbow.

The essential test of hearing is the ordinary speaking voice. A child who can hear an ordinarily spoken voice at six feet is fit to be taught in an average class. Acute hearing, of course, is much better than that. If the child can only hear distinctly at three feet, it should be put on the front benches or in a special class.

The watch test should be made on every class, using the same watch for each child. A watch of average loudness should be heard at a distance of about four feet. The best way of testing is to use a stop watch and make the child say when it is shut off. If a stop watch is not available, an ordinary watch held close to the ear, and then moved slowly away can be used. The child is told to say "stop" when it can no longer hear the ticking of the watch.

The most serious thing about the ears, short of total deafness, is pus discharge. This is also one of the most serious physical conditions of the whole body. It may not, however, be accompanied by any deafness whatever.

Discharge from the ear means, of course, inflammation of the middle ear with perforation of the eardrum. Its great danger consists in the possibility that the infection will spread from the middle ear to the mastoids, and even from the mastoids to the brain, causing a brain abscess.

Every child with either an intermittent or continuous discharge from the middle ear, should be under the care of a competent physician. The most likely cause of this condition is an infection of the throat, the tonsils, or especially the adenoids. An infected adenoid middle ear tube which goes from the throat to the middle ear, and continuously reinflect the middle ear. After its removal this danger ceases.

So They Do Get Over It In Time?

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

ANXIOUS: Dear, you are only a little girl, and I certainly can't advise you to take a stand against your mother. She is trying to protect you until you are older. You think now that your mother should not talk to the boys that she allows you to go out with—lecture them, you say. Well, wait until you are your mother's age and have a girl of your own, and see if you won't feel the same way about your girl.

As to the smoking, I agree with your married sister. Why do it just because those you go with do, especially when your mother does not want you to? Why not show them that you can be different? Your mother probably does many things for you, doesn't she? Why not try to please her?

Here's one "for the book," boys. What can you say now?

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: Recently there have been a great many letters in your column about 'kissable' girls and 'unkissable' boys. I am just turned 17, and I have yet to come across one of the latter. I don't pretend to know whose fault it is, but I know I've never known a boy my age who was above necking. They certainly are all alike."

"Our crowd is not a 'fast' one, either. I have never been allowed to go out with a boy, and the other girls I go with have parents who are just as strict as mine—and the boys too. I don't know where they get the idea that girls are for nothing but necking. Every time they see a dark corner or a sofa or a girl they begin to get mushy. They are horribly insistent too, even though they know the girls don't like it."

"At a recent party (a well chaperoned one, too), the host and a couple of others deliberately blew a fuse in the cellar so that there was no light at all downstairs."

"Each time that I meet a new boy I hope he'll be decent, and every time I'm disappointed. I know lots and lots of decent fellows around 25, which is the age of my older sister (who is to be married this fall). I honestly don't believe that anyone short of that age is anything but a girl chaser and a cheap petter! Even my sister thinks they're pretty bad, and she's had lots of experience, at least lots more than I."

"Anyway, I'm perfectly disgusted, and I hope that next year—college will be different. Not that I want any of that silly 'just chums' business, but I think there ought to be a happy medium. However, from my experience, so far, I probably shan't find it."

"COMPLETELY DISILLUSIONED"

So they DO get over it in time, do they? Well, that, at least, is encouraging, isn't it? And "just chums" is foolish too? Well, well, and well, as someone has said.

Maybe each of those "mushy" boys thought that if he didn't neck each time he got a chance he'd hear some girl with whom he wanted to make a hit, say: "Gee, that kid's slow! Spent a whole evening with him and he never kissed me once!" How about that angle?

M. A. S. also thinks that "Smiles" and his girl friend may safely marry, and be happy if they will consult the pastor of the girl's parish. She thinks, however, that the children will all have to be Catholics, which, of course, would have to be agreed upon beforehand.

LOST TRUE BLUE PAL: If you can't even remember what you said to offend the boy friend, I don't think it can be very dreadful, dear? Touchy, wasn't he? It seems to me that after acting like that, he is the one who should apologize, not you. If, however, you really think you said something you shouldn't or that might have been misinterpreted, why write him a note and tell him so and that you are sorry. And if he continues grouchy about it, don't worry about the matter. It's just plain silliness.

SAD GIRL: Nothing to be done except to be so nice when you get a chance to talk to the boy you like, that he will find you irresistible and ask for your company.

Employ Expert Aid For Beauty

By GLADYS GLAD

In yesterday's article I attempted to show you the importance of employing a skilled, well-trained surgeon in having your face lifted. In other branches of plastic surgery, it is equally important that the surgeon be an expert.

Plastic surgery deals with the building up of bony, fatty and muscular tissues. In most cases, the surgeon either has to remove tissue or replace them by the injection of foreign matter.

In a great many instances in the past, paraffin was the chief substance used to remodel the nose and fill out hollows. And often the results were satisfactory. But they were not permanent. Sooner or later, the paraffin would melt down in little drops, giving the face a queer, bumpy appearance. Or it would slip out of place and serious irritation to the surrounding tissue would result. An operation would then be necessary to remove the paraffin from the tissues.

Bone-grafting is now the preferred method of reshaping the nose. This is much safer and more permanent than the paraffin method. A screen actress, for example, had her nose remodeled with a piece of cartilage that had been removed from her ear. The number of seen contracts which she has been offered testify to the success of the operation.

One of the most difficult operations in plastic surgery is the removal of fat. Another screen actress had pounds of excess tissue removed from her hips and legs a few years ago by means of plastic surgery. But many of the best surgeons refuse to undertake such operations, claiming that they are both dangerous and ineffective. The fat that is removed comes back almost immediately.

Every operation incurs a certain amount of risk. But the employment of a competent, skilled surgeon will eliminate half the danger.

All-Star Victory Evens Series With Langs

SUBDUED CHAMPIONS 7 TO 3 IN LABOR DAY POST-SEASON GAME

Winners Play Snappy
Ball; Huge Crowd
Sees Contest

Coming back triumphantly after their indifferent exhibition in the opener, the All Stars squared the post-season softball series with the champion Lang Chevrolet Co. by winning the second installment, 7 to 3, before another overflow crowd at Cox Field Monday night.

Manager Arnold Boxwell revamped his starting lineup slightly for the second series game, putting Dick Murrell on first base and "Skipper" Findlay on second, and both players delivered with two hits apiece.

Langs also introduced a number of changes from their regular starting lineup.

The hits were evenly divided, each team getting nine bingles, but the All-Stars on this occasion showed better judgment in cashing in on their opportunities.

John Hurley rejoined Langs and started on the mound for the city champs. He pitched his best ball for the first three innings but in the fourth the All-Stars broke through the Lang defense to score three runs. With one down, LeSourd walked, Yeakley was safe on an error and then came successive singles by Kersey, Murrell and Finlay.

The winners added two more runs in the fifth when Smith walked and Gene Leakey hit a home run to left. The sixth inning saw the All-Stars produce their final two runs when with two down, Leopold singled and Frame tripled, the latter scoring on an error.

Gibney went in to pitch for Langs in the seventh and although he worked three hits he escaped being scored on in the two innings he worked.

Langs scored their first run in the opening inning when Lee Rusee smacked a homer to left center. They scored again in the seventh on Patterson's single and a three-bagger by Gibney and marked up their third and final run in the ninth on an error on Patterson's grounder and singles by Corr and Gibney.

Rusee, Patterson and Gibney each obtained two hits for Langs.

Gene Leakey was injured in a collision with Bill LeSourd in the seventh inning, the two coming together in going after Bell's fly to deep short. Leakey was reported to have suffered a fractured nose.

Frame pitched for the winners, after their indifferent exhibition. With each team having one victory to its credit in the series, the third meeting between the two teams will take place Tuesday night at 6:15 o'clock.

The net proceeds from the Labor Day series total amounted to $31, which fell somewhat short of the gate receipts for the opening series game last Friday. Lineups:

The University of Dayton Flyers football team for 1930 depend upon the eleven lettermen and forty-seven squad members who will answer Head Coach Harry Baujan's initial call for grid practice September 17. The complete squad call, just issued, indicates the squad will be larger than any in the last three years.

The Flyer coaching staff headed by Baujan, former Notre Dame star, is one of the finest ever to coach the Dayton football machine. Baujan enters upon his eighth year of coaching at Dayton. His efforts have been rewarded with unusual success and Flyer followers are looking to him for a winning outfit again this fall.

Jack Keefe, former Michigan and Brown star halfback, who coached at Steele High School in Dayton for several years after leaving Brown, was added to the coaching staff late last spring. He is a splendid student of the game and will make a valuable addition to the coaching staff.

Bill Belanich was named assistant coach in mid-season last year upon the resignation of George Fitzpatrick, now deceased. Belanich was captain of the Flyers in 1926 and was an outstanding tackle in his varsity days. He will continue his duties this year also as Charlie Baumann, former Flyer quarterback, was recently named freshman coach.

There will be a new champion crowned in the 1930 President's Cup Tournament, at the Xenia Country Club.

It was made certain Labor Day when Dr. H. L. Sayre eliminated Bob Shoup, youthful defending champion, 2 up and 1 to play in a second round eighteen-hole match. By virtue of his victory over the 1929 titleholder, Dr. Sayre progressed to the semi-finals of the tourney.

In the consolation "Brown Derby" tourney for the sixteen golfers who failed to qualify for the President's Cup match play, three first round matches were played off Monday. Charles Darlington beat Henry Flynn, 3 and 2; Leon Spahr defeated Ralph Hall, 7 and 6 in a 36-hole match; and Millen Davidson eliminated Charles Fisher, 5 and 3. Spahr and Hall were even at the end of eighteen holes and decided to play two more rounds.

Plans for the annual picnic and outing of the Greene County Fish and Game Protective Association will be formulated at a meeting of sportsmen in the basement of the Court House at 8 o'clock Wednesday according to Raymond Wolf, secretary of the association, who urges a full attendance. A date for the yearly all-day frolic is expected to be set at this meeting.

Business men affiliated with the Xenia Retail Merchants' Association will be the guests of the Hibbert Theaters, Inc., newly formed local corporation, at 6 o'clock banquet at the Elks' Club Wednesday night. The corporation is sponsoring the construction of a new playhouse and commercial building on a site recently acquired at 42-44 W. Main St.

Baseball Star and Fiancee

Al Simmons, slugging outfielder of the World's Champion Athletics, and his pretty bride-to-be, Miss Dorothy Kuhn, dramatic instructor, announced their engagement recently. The couple met through Connie Mack's daughter and the baseball player lost no time pressing his suit.

PHILLIE FANS LIKE LOSER

Shotton's Last Placers Out-Draw World Champs;
Burt Is Praised

By DAVIS J. WALSH
I. N. S. Sports Writer
PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 2.—There seems to be something about a winner that enrages this town out of all reason and, on the other hand, it apparently can learn to love a loser in a very big way.

Anyhow, one story here today is that the Philadelphia Athletics, champions of the world, are experiencing something of the same situation that confronted them back in 1914 when everybody stayed away from the ballpark very resolutely. Another is that the Phillies, having won forty-three out of 130 games for a natty .331 are disposed to go along with Mr. Burt Shotton under whose auspices this most dubious of records has been sponsored. Ordinarily, one might look for Mr. Shotton to hit the asphalt on the first bounce, particularly in view of the fact that many deemed him to have started the season with a potential first division club.

In this connection, it might also be mentioned that he is laboring in the interests of W. F. Baker, who like Sam Breadon never waits until he sees the whites of their eyes before firing. He has been known to fire without seeing anything except the standing of the clubs. His tolerance in the case of Mr. Shotton would be surprising. If it wasn't for the fact that everything about Mr. Shotton is surprising. He is one of the most successful failures known to baseball.

The mugs in the stand are for him and greet his every appearance with the silence of profound respect. His players are for him. So, it seems, is Mr. Baker, although this is largely surmise. He has given no public utterance of his implied approval but this seems to be taken for granted, the idea being that everybody approves of Mr. Shotton, so why not Mr. Baker?

I talked to Shotton himself this morning and he seemed to have every confidence that he would be able to go on trying to build up the Phillies next year, which is something like trying to make a vest out of an armhole. The club has two of the hitting leaders of the league in Klein and O'Doul, two good infielders in Whitely and Thevenow and the unfortunate reputation of being a good ball club that cannot win. What it happens to be in a very pool ball club that gives an impression to which it isn't at all entitled.

It hits above .300 as a club but does most of its hitting after the ball game is lost beyond recall. It has no pitchers. Two of its infielders are playing on the dime that Mr. Baker gave them as a token of his esteem. The outfield, if not defensively impossible, is at least highly improbable. The club, in spite of its punch, is so slow that it hits into more double plays than any other in the major leagues.

However, whatever it is, the club is Mr. Shotton's own and, as such, it is something to be moderately proud of. They gave him nothing to manage three years ago. He has been managing it with intelligence, if not success, ever since. He has made a lot of trades and none of them has been bad. This is the first of two things he has made on behalf of his owner, the other being money. Whatever else they are, the Phillies at least are an interesting outfit.

They are so interesting, in fact, that they had more paid attendance than the world's champion Athletics during recent home stands of the two local clubs. The champions, it appears, are being taken pretty much for granted here, just as the last winning club Connie Mack had back in 1914 was ignored because it won too much. On that occasion, Mr. Mack had to sell his stars to get even. I don't say the same condition exists today but, according to the local version, if the owners are staying awake at night it isn't to gloat over the box office figures.

FATHER OF XENIAN CALLED BY DEATH

Funeral services were held in Indianapolis Monday afternoon for Frank Huston, 71, father of Ward M. Huston, N. Galloway St., this city. Mr. Huston's death occurred Saturday after an illness of a week from heart trouble.

Mr. Huston is survived by three children: Ward M. Doughty, Glen-dale, Calif., and Mrs. Albert Muter, Shirley, Ind. His wife preceded him in death a number of years. Burial was made in Indianapolis.

Mr. and Mrs. Ward Huston and two children attended the services Monday.

PUTT-PUTT-PUTT

The two surviving entrants in the miniature golf endurance contest being staged at the Old Mill Camp links at Cedarville, entered upon their eighth consecutive day of continuous play Tuesday, each vowing to keep going indefinitely. One of the boys is said to have suggested that they compromise and split first prize but the offer was not accepted and both youths—Robert Hopkins and Howard Freed, of Jamestown—are now determined to be the last to quit.

The Theater

Chester Morris, who began talkie life as a "heavy" as a result of his remarkably fine performance in the crime picture, "Alibi," is to be made over into a leading man.

No more will Chester play the heavy who loses the girl at the end of the film. Roland West, who has the young actor under contract, is authority for the statement, the decision coming as the result of many letters from women fans urging that Chester be given heroic roles.

West has bought a story, "False Dawn," from Arden Coombs, in which Chester will be featured as the lover. West will not direct the picture himself, since he has decided upon "Death Takes a Holiday" for the next United Artists picture. Chester is to have the lead in this, too, but the stage play will be changed to make "Death," the leading character, attractive instead of unpleasant. Morris' whole expression is being changed by the addition of a mustache, which he will probably continue to wear.

There was an impromptu memorial for Lon Chaney at a Hollywood fight stadium the other night. It started when the announcer called attention to the vacant ring-side seat which the actor regularly occupied during his life. With all the lights out Alan Hale climbed into the ring, illuminated his face with a flashlight, and recited a poem in memory of his friend.

Though production is slack at Warner Brothers, the company is buying stories for next year's program. Latest to be purchased is "God's Gift to Women," from the typewriter of Frederick Hazlett Breen. As the hero is a small town slicker with a gift for gab, there seems reason to suspect that Grant Withers may get the role. The author is the son of a Missouri minister and, until a few years ago, was a St. Louis newspaperman. He has been a steady contributor of late to the Saturday Evening Post.

Even the genuine Negro performers have to don black-face make-up for the "Amos 'n' Andy" picture, "Check and Double-check." This is done because they have to photograph a uniform brown.

Paramount has signed Charles Rogers to a new contract as another indication of this young man's success. Rogers has made nine talking pictures and his personal appearances in the East drew flappers by the thousands. It was at the insistence of fans that his nickname "Buddy" was dropped from his billings.

The veteran stage actor, Joseph Cawthorn, has been signed by Fox to play the plumber in the forthcoming talkie, "The Princess and the Plumber." Maureen O'Sullivan will play opposite Charles Farrell in this film. It was first believed that Janet Gaynor, who has made her peace with Fox, would be put into the role.

fore actually making the attempt. Present plans are for the Question Mark to land at the Curtiss airport in Valleystream, Long Island, N. Y. Later Coste and Bellonte expect to continue to Dallas, Tex., thus completing a trip entitling them to the collection of a $25,000 prize offered by Colonel William E. Easterwood of that city.

The successful completion of the flight from Paris to New York direct would materialize an aviation dream for which half a dozen gallant men already have sacrificed their lives. Outstanding on the roster of these heroes, perhaps, are the names of ill-fated Charles Nungesser and Francois Coll, who set the example that initiated other attempts to negotiate flights from east-to-west in one jump, as Colonel Charles Lindbergh in his hop from New York to Paris.

One by one these courageous aviators stepped into their machines to follow the path of Nungesser and Coll, disappearing like a vanishing speck over the Atlantic wastes, never to be heard of again. The very hazard and difficulty of the flight, therefore, spurred Coste and Bellonte all the more in a determined attempt to unfurl the tricolor over Manhattan a day after leaving the spires of Paris in their wake.

The sesqui plane Question Mark, an air veteran tested in every conceivable manner and under all sorts of climate and atmospheric conditions, was fueled for a cruising radius of more than 5,000 miles and powered with a new Hispano-Sulza type motor capable of an 150-mile-an-hour speed.

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—Speeding down the Atlantic seaboard on the "home stretch" in their spectacular nonstop flight from Paris to New York, Captain Deseudonne Coste, famous French flier, and his companion, Maurice Bellonte, are facing less favorable conditions after experiencing "providential" weather all the way across the ocean. But even so the weather ahead of them, is not such as to cause any alarm.

Dr. James H. Kimball, United States weather bureau meteorologist in New York, told International News Service today that the crimson sesqui plane, "Question Mark," would encounter "cloudy weather the rest of the way with the possibility of light rains and fog." Heavy cloud banks were reported from Eastport, Maine, to Highland light but it was believed that the foggy conditions would "burn off" before afternoon.

"They'll make it," was the confident expression in aeronautical circles after Coste and Bellonte had accomplished more than two-thirds of the flight and were still traveling at a speed estimated at over 100 miles an hour. They had spanned the Atlantic, heading in toward the Atlantic seaboard as they passed close to Cape Race.

Dr. Kimball pored over a huge map, changing details and positions, as information came to him reporting the progress of Coste and Bellonte. He seemed optimistic over the successful culmination of this hazardous east-to-west arduous—a flight that brought death and disaster to so many other courageous airmen.

"Coste enjoyed providential weather across the ocean," said Dr. Kimball. "He made remarkable speed because the winds were behind him most of the way. I figure that he arrived off Cape Race about 6 o'clock this morning and that he is now coming in down along the Atlantic seaboard."

"The cloudy, foggy weather ahead should not defeat them in their efforts to make New York. They have plenty of flying radius left. When they were in the vicinity of Cape Race they were out only about thirty hours and they have a capacity of sixty hours flying. Their flight across the Atlantic, at a speed of over 100 miles an hour, is remarkable—as remarkable as any of the flights over the ocean from west to east."

Officials at Curtiss field were preparing, meanwhile, for the arrival of the intrepid Frenchmen. The airport's huge floodlight will be turned on when darkness descends. Special police precautions have been made to handle the huge crowd that is expected to converge on the field from all directions late this afternoon.

Attends School Every Day Now

"My daughter Kathleen is fifteen years old. For three years she had suffered with pains as so many young girls do. One day we saw an advertisement of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the San Antonio Evening News. I bought a bottle and it helped her so much that she has been taking it regularly and is now completely relieved and able to attend school every day."—Mrs. Victor H. Call, Route #4, Box 76, San Antonio, Texas.

LOSES HIS SHOES

FRED "Bulldog" Smith, star third-baseman for the All-Stars softball team, is bemoaning the loss of a perfectly good pair of spiked shoes. Fred had the shoes at the athletic field Monday night during the second game of the Lang Chevrolet series and left them beneath a bench. After the game, when he went to get them, they had disappeared. The third-sacker is hoping the shoes will re-appear in time for the game Tuesday night.

CENTRAL HIGH REST ROOMS RENOVATED; P. T. A. CREDITED

The teachers' rest room and the room used as the boys' rest room and the Central High School have recently been renovated and refurnished by the executive committee of Central High P. T. A., composed of Mrs. Charles Adair, president, Mrs. J. H. Benbow, Mrs. L. S. Hyman, Mrs. P. C. Bankard, Mrs. J. J. Stout, Mrs. George Baldwin and Mrs. Howard Lighthiser.

The floors in both rooms were re-painted and new rugs were bought for the boys' room. The furniture has been repainted in an attractive shade of green and was re-upholstered by Mrs. B. U. Bell and Mrs. Lighthiser. New draperies were made by Mrs. O. C. Custer and now the rooms present an attractive appearance.

Two pictures of the late Miss Mae Harper, one of the best beloved teachers at Central High, were enlarged and one was placed on the table in the teachers' rest room and the other hung on the wall in the Junior High boys' study room.

Members of the board of education and school officials expressed their gratitude to the P. T. A. for its work in brightening the two rooms.

was believed that of Strindberg, while the bones were the remains of Frankel.

After a close inspection of the Andree camp as he found it, Dr. Horn concluded that the explorers after safely landing in their balloon, were unable to endure for long the rigors of the vicious Arctic climate. Exhaustion, he believed, ended their sufferings within a few weeks. This was attested to by the fact that numerous shells remained untouched, showing that the explorers found little opportunity to hunt game. White Island offers bear, fox and grouse.

not only the icepacked bodies but also various camp implements which were dug out of the ice where the last camp had sheltered the explorers. Among these were the Andree sledge, rifles and tent stakes. In the ship's safe was locked away the brittle diary of Andree, in whose pages Dr. Horn hopes to discover the entire thrilling account of the expedition from the day it left Spitzbergen to within a few days of Andree's death.

Three metal-lined pine chests were ready here to receive the bodies when the Bratvaag dropped anchor. Expert embalmers and refrigerators were waiting to take care of the remains. Andree's logbook and diary, Dr. Horn said, would be turned over to scientists for preservation.

On revelation by Dr. Horn that he believed the Andree camping spot on White Island still had much to offer in the way of relics, the Norwegian government radioed the steamship Isbjorn to turn back on its course to Tromsø and make a thorough search of the location.

The Isbjorn originally left Norwegian shores some days ago to search for the Bratvaag after learning of Dr. Horn's discovery. It failed to contact with the sealing vessel, as did a number of other vessels bent on similar mission. The ship carried a number of newspaper correspondents.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—Possibility that the log which was painstakingly kept by the explorer Auguste Salomon Andree on his balloon venture to the north pole may supersede the widely-heralded diary in importance and richness of content was offered today in a report to the London Times by its Skjærvoy correspondent.

First examination, the report stated, revealed to the delight of its discoverers that the Andree's observation log contained several hundred pages of the Swedish explorer's easily readable handwriting. These timely and detailed entries, it was indicated may unfold a story far more complete and dramatic than the small, ice-cracked diary which was kept by Andree.

The log was found in the small canvas boat which was recovered by Dr. Horn, while the diary rested in Andree's vest pocket and consequently suffered more from exposure than the log. The latter, according to the Times, may tell the graphic story of a 200-mile march over treacherous ice and snow which was endured by Andree and his men in a heroic attempt to fight their way out of the barren north towards civilization.

Line by line, page after page, will follow the record by day and hour of Andree's expedition, in the belief of the Times correspondent, who viewed the document. It was held quite probable that every major incident of the trip from the first to the last would be found faithfully recorded by the careful and methodical hand of Andree.

Those who discovered the log and permitted themselves a cursory glimpse over some of its pages intimated that even as death faced his party, Andree found occasion to make light of their fate. In one of the entries written into the log, he was reported to have jokingly dwelled on plans for his next balloon expedition with a bigger and better balloon.

The log, it was believed, along with the diary, will be turned over to scientists for preservation and reading.

Bargains for Banquets

Where popular demand reduces prices

"One policy of your company which gives me the greatest satisfaction," writes an A&P customer, "is that you do not take advantage of a special demand for a product to profiteer."

"For example, on the third of last July my A&P store sold good quality watermelons from 25c to 55c below other stores in town. A&P, realizing that many people enjoy a nice melon for Fourth of July picnics, put them within reach of everyone."

A&P believes in making it as easy as possible for people to get what they want when they want it most. That is why A&P provides special bargains in fruits and vegetables at the height of their season, in turkeys at Thanksgiving and Christmas, in delicacies during the Holidays, and in eggs at Easter.

The usual custom is to charge a little more when people for one reason or another are pretty sure to buy anyhow. A&P thinks these are just the times to make the cost of high living as low as possible.

AT THE top of old Dorfchenberg, not far from the black forest, there is a wilderness of pines where forty-one trails converge. Even experienced hikers were helpless in the maze of paths until kindly peasants carefully marked each trail with a stone guide.

Through the maze of modern products advertisements guide you straight to merchandise of full value. Advertisements save your money by indicating worthy goods. Advertised products do not vary in quality. Ask for them by name.

Study the advertisements carefully and you will be repaid. Take notice of them and you can cut your budget. That means money for a growing savings account, a trim Parisien hat, or enough to repaint the kitchen. You will be surprised to find how that extra value in advertised products tucks away pennies in your purse. Advertised merchandise gives more value dollar for dollar. HEARST REQUESTED TO LEAVE FRANCE; EXPOSE OF TREATY IS BLAMED

Publisher Accepts His Banishment Philo-
sophically

PARIS, Sept. 2.—The Paris newspapers today announced that William Randolph Hearst had left Paris yesterday for London as the result of a foreign office request that he leave French soil.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—William Randolph Hearst issued the following statement here today:

"I have no complaint to make. The officials were extremely polite. They said I was an enemy of France and a danger in their midst. They made me feel quite important."

"They said I could stay in France a little while longer if I desired, that they would take a chance on nothing disastrous happening to the republic."

"But I told them that I did not want to take the responsibility of endangering the great French nation, that America had saved it once during the war, and I would save it again by leaving."

"Furthermore, I was like the man who was told that he was going blind, and who said he did not mind, as he had seen everything any way."

"Similarly, I had seen everything in France, including some very interesting governmental performances."

"Then I asked Mr. Tardieu's emissary to express to Mr. Tardieu my immense admiration at his amazing alertness in protecting France from the peril of invasion, and we parted with quite elaborate politeness."

"It was a little bit foolish, but extremely French."

"The reason for the strained relations—to use a proper diplomatic term—was the publication of the secret Anglo-French treaty two years ago by the Hearst newspapers, which upset some international 'apologists,' but informed the American people; and of course that being the reason, the French government was entirely right in leveling its attack at me, and quite wrong in its action towards Mr. Horan, who was only my agent."

"Also, there might have been some slight irritation at the occasional intimations in our papers that France, now being the richest nation in the world, might use some of the German indemnity to pay her honest debts to America, especially because if it had not been for America she would not be paying indemnity instead of receiving it."

"If being a competent journalist and a loyal American makes a man persona non grata in France, I think I can endure the situation without loss of sleep."

"In fact, the whole affair reminds me of the story of the rather effeminate young man who went to call on his best girl and found her in the arms of another young fellow."

"The effeminate youth went into the hall, took up his successful rival's umbrella, broke it and said: 'Now I hope it rains!'"

"You see, for the French national policy of 'revenge' to be completely successful, we will have to have rain."

"William Randolph Hearst."

BANDITS GET $7,000 LOOT

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 2.—Three masked bandits ambushed a proprietor of a chain of candy stores and his wife and niece near their home in west Philadelphia today and obtained more than $7,000 in cash and jewelry.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence S. Maier and Miss Adele Britton, the victims, had stopped in front of the Maier garage when the bandits appeared at the door of the Maier auto, flourishing revolvers. Jewelry valued at about $7,000 was taken from the women and a ring and $100 in cash were taken from Maier.

The bandits fled in an auto bearing New Jersey license plates.

BELIEVE BALLOONS CONTINUE ALOFT IN BENNETT CUP RACES

One Is Sighted Over
Syracuse; 20,000 See
Take-Off

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 2.—One of the six balloons in the Gordon Bennett international balloon race was sighted at 7 a. m. today as it sailed over this city, it was flying southeastward.

Some time later it was reported over Cortland, N. Y.

Identification of the bag was prevented by weather conditions. The balloon was flying at about 2,000 feet.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 2.—The skies and capricious winds above Lake Erie early today apparently held the secret of the fate of the six balloons that took off from Cleveland airport late yesterday under threatening weather conditions in the nineteenth race for the Gordon Bennett international balloon trophy.

Southwesterly winds blew the crafts out of sight of Cleveland yesterday over the edge of the lake and last reports indicated that most of them were heading toward the St. Lawrence River valley.

Two balloons were sighted over the lake early today by coast guards, who because of clouds, were unable to identify the bags. Within an hour after the crafts were last reported seen, a terrific rain and wind storm, accompanied by lightning, broke over the region.

A report that a balloon was seen falling in Lake Erie at about 9 o'clock last night sent two coast guard cutters in search for the craft. The lake was thoroughly scoured but no trace of the balloon was found. Captain John Daly of the Cleveland Coast Guard station, discounted the report.

Nearly 20,000 persons saw the take-off of the six balloons. The event climaxed a full day of unique aerial activities reminiscent of last year's national air races.

C. G. Andrus, chief of the Cleveland airport weather bureau, said this morning that the probable course of the balloons would be generally toward Toronto, Ont. He said that at the prevailing wind velocity the balloons should arrive in that region this morning.

Refute Reports That

TROMSOE, Norway, Sept. 2.—Salomon Auguste Andree came back to his starting point today, a little fishing village from which he sailed with two companions thirty-three years ago to trust his fate to a swinging balloon in the hope of reaching the top of the world.

The venture failed, but in death the adventurers remained triumphant. World honors awaited the tiny whaler Bratvaag as it sailed into the harbor today, bearing at least that part of the polar heroes which thirty-three winters of ice and snow failed to wear away.

Lying silent on the forward deck of the vessel, the bones of Andree, Nils Strindberg and Knut Frankel face the hills where three decades previous the daring Swedes completed preparations for their fantastic flight in a gasbag from Spitzbergen to the North Pole or where the winds would carry them.

Dr. Gunnar Horn, leader of an Arctic expedition which stumbled upon the remains of the Andree camp on White Island, carefully supervised removal from the vessel of the remains of the explorers—two unrecognizable skeletons and a pile of bones. He was emphatic in explaining that previous reports to the effect that the bodies were found in a nearly perfect state of preservation were erroneous.

Andree's body, he stated, was identified by a coat button bearing an insignia and by the fact that his small diary was found in the vestpocket. The headbones were broken. The second skeleton

POSTPONED EVENTS HELD AT CLEVELAND ON MONDAY PROGRAM

Attempt New Parachute Record; Youth Will Make Attempt

CLEVELAND, Sept. 2.—With the six competitive balloons in the nineteenth Gordon Bennett international classic well on their way in quest of the championship trophy after being given a rousing sendoff last night, air enthusiasts here today turned their attention to the completion of the aeronautical carnival being held in connection with the ballooning event. The events on the carnival program today were to have been held on Sunday, but were postponed because of inclement weather.

With a complete day's program slated, the aerial exhibitions were to begin at 10 a. m.

An attempt to break the world's altitude record for parachute jumping was the highlight on the program. The record seeker is Edward Ballash, 17-year-old Cleveland youth, who planned to ascend to a height of 25,000 feet, or nearly five miles, before stepping from his plane for the drop to the ground.

Another feature of considerable importance was the proposed attempt of Mrs. Blanche Wilcox Noyes, noted woman flyer, to better her own record for airplane spins. Defying death at every turn, Mrs. Noyes yesterday set the first official world's record for spins to be made by a woman flyer. She turned eleven spins in twenty seconds in setting the mark.

Wally Franklin and Jack O'Mear were to break for glider honors and an exhibition with a 1910 model "pusher" plane was to be given by Dewey Noyes, in other parts of the program. Several stunt flying and formation exhibitions also were scheduled.

ADmits MURDER OF WIFE; STABS SELF

CLEVELAND, Sept. 2.—Sobbing that he "could not bear to lose her," George Olteam, 43, today admitted after several hours of questioning, that he stabbed to death his wife, Mrs. Fimia Olteam, young Rumanian dressmaker, as she sat chatting in the home of a friend here last night.

Olteam was arrested early this morning. He had a four-inch self-inflicted knife wound in his neck.

Olteam was first identified as the murderer of his wife by Mrs. Marie Monia, with whom Mrs. Olteam was visiting at the time of the crime. Later, under pressure of police questioning, he broke down and confessed the killing.

START NEW STATE BUILDING SOON

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 2.—Announcement that the actual work of constructing the new state office building here will begin about October first was made today.

The contract for general construction work is expected to be awarded at the next meeting of the state office building commission. The commissioners are scheduled to convene September 22.

LABOR DAY TRAFFIC CLAIMS FIVE LIVES

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 2.—Five Ohioans lost their lives in traffic accidents Labor Day, a check-up by International News Service revealed today, showing an unusual low holiday toll for the state.

The most tragic accident occurred near Moraine City, south of Dayton, when two women and a 2-year-old boy were killed beneath the wheels of a Cincinnati and Lake Erie Express tractor car.

The victims were Mrs. Edna Hayburn, 24, of Trimble, Athens County; her baby son, Ernest Hayburn, Jr., and Miss Flossie Hayburn, 18, of Jacksonville, O., her sister-in-law.

Ernest Hayburn, husband of the dead woman, was critically injured. He is in a Middletown hospital where physicians held little hope for his recovery.

The Hayburn automobile was struck by the tractor car at a crossing late yesterday.

WATCHMAN SLAIN BY PLANT ROBBERS

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 2.—Charles Widener, 64-year-old night watchman employed by the Tunn Glue Co., was brutally murdered early today when he surprised a group of prowlers in the act of looting the plant.

The man's body was found by Joseph Day, private operative for a burglar alarm system, when Day went out to investigate Widener's failure to turn in his regular call.

Widener's head had been crushed by heavy blows inflicted when he struggled with the burglars. Only a small amount of cash had been obtained from the company's safe by the watchman's slayers.

SIX FLYERS READY FOR FLIGHTS TO EUROPE

By International News Service
While Captain Coste's French plane whirled over the Atlantic today toward New York, six American aviators were waiting good weather for hops in three planes to Europe. One, or possibly all of the planes, may take off within the next twenty-four hours.

J. Erroll Boyd was waiting at Montreal to start his flight to London. His plane is the monoplane Columbia in which Clarence D. Chamberlin and Charles A. Le

CHICAGO RIVER FRONT FIRE LOSS $1,000,000

CHICAGO, Sept. 2.—Eight successive explosions of gasoline and oil tanks caused a river front fire here which was brought under control today only after a damage estimated at $1,000,000 had been wrought to warehouses and manufacturing plants.

Fighting the conflagration from both land and water, one half of the city's fire-fighting apparatus was called into play before the blaze was subdued this morning.

"LEGS" DIAMOND, ARRESTED IN GERMANY, WILL BE DEPORTED

BERLIN, Sept. 2.—Jack "Legs" Diamond, New York underworld king, will continue his interrupted tour through Germany to the closest frontier and out of the country under police escort, it was indicated today.

Informing that the gangster was being held by Aix-La-Chapelle police pending extradition request from the United States, authorities here pointed out that according to such a request would be impossible because that extradition treaty

OHIO M. E. CHURCH CONFERENCE OPENS

OXFORD, O., Sept. 2.—Bishop Edgar Blake, of Indianapolis, is presiding over the sessions of the annual Ohio conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church which opened here today.

More than 750 clergymen and delegates were present at the opening session. It is expected that more than 1,000 laymen, representing various sections of the Buckeye state, will attend the conference which will close September 8.

Assignment of ministers to their pastorates for the coming year will be announced by Bishop Blake at the closing session.

FEARS WIFE DEAD SO SHOTS SELF

WAUSEON, O., Sept. 2.—Suffering from a self-inflicted bullet wound in his chest, Floyd Hinkle, 49, farmer, is in Memorial Hospital here today.

Under the false impression that he had killed his wife during a quarrel at their farm home, a mile east of Swanton, Hinkle turned a shotgun upon himself. Mrs. Hinkle, however, had fainted and fell to the floor uninjured.

Escorted to police headquarters, Diamond upset the usual rigidly formal atmosphere of the German police station and immediately became the object of frank curiosity. Dressed in a smart grey suit and light felt hat, he accepted arrest as nonchalantly as he lit his cigarettes.

German police authorities admitted that they arrested Diamond without official request from the United States but solely on the basis of newspaper reports that he is wanted in New York.

He spent the night in a cell in the city jail.

Cheered By Islanders Off Upper Canada; Radio Says
Plane "O. K."; Expected To Reach New York
Early Tuesday Evening.

CHATHAM, Mass., Sept. 2.—The trans-Atlantic French biplane, Question Mark, was pointed toward Canso, N. S., shortly after 9 o'clock (EDT) according to intercepted messages picked up by the Radio Marine Corporation of America's station here.

The local radio station was not in direct touch with the French birdmen but the radio messages heard indicated, station officials said, that everything was okay with the plane.

At 8:47 a. m. (EDT) the Question Mark was talking with the Western Union cable ship Lord Kelvin off the upper Canadian coast. No position was given.

No other shore station along the New England coast had heard the Question Mark as far as could be learned.

out of the ocean's horizon into the rising sun. Looming larger and larger and humming steadily, the plane soared over the island at top speed, heading southwest. Apparently Coste intended to steer a course straight down the Nova Scotia coast past Halifax and along the New England coast to New York.

Basing deductions on the average speed of 100 miles an hour put forth by the Question Mark since departure from LeBourget flying field in Paris at 5:55 a. m., New York time yesterday, the intrepid fliers should sight the spires of Manhattan's skyscrapers between seven and eight o'clock Eastern Daylight Time tonight.

Arrival in New York will materialize for Captain Coste a dream that men have died for in the hope of realizing, trusting their lives to the vagaries of wind and storm in a craft built of tested wood and iron. Six of these ventures have failed; others have given up be-

BILLY ARNOLD WINS ALTOONA EVENT TO CINCH SPEED CROWN

Wins Abbreviated Labor
Day Classic In Fast
Time

ALTOONA, Pa., Sept. 2.—Billy Arnold, young Chicago race driver, today was assured of winning the 1930 automobile speed title, having annexed the Labor Day classic here. He drove a Miller-Hartz special, defeating a noteworthy field.

Arnold's victory climaxed his win at the Memorial Day races at Indianapolis.

The race, although scheduled for 200 miles, was ended abruptly on the ninety-third lap when a heavy downpour of rain flooded the track, making driving extremely dangerous.

Exactly 116 1/4 miles had been completed when a halt was called. Arnold's time was one hour and one minute.

Deacon Litz, of Dubois, Pa., piloting a Dusenbergs, flashed across the finish line of the huge wooden saucer to finish second, followed closely by Shorty Cantion, of Akron, O., in his Miller-Shoefield.

Arnold's win gave him 139 points and increased his season total to 1,027. Cantion, his nearest rival for the 1930 A. A. championship, garnered 100 points by placing third and increased his season total to 954.

LABOR CELEBRATES AND HEARS COOPER

MARION, O., Sept. 2.—After participating in one of the biggest Labor Day celebrations ever held here, approximately 10,000 Ohio union workers and friends of organized labor had returned to their homes today.

Although the program was conducted under the auspices of the Columbus and Marion labor organizations, various central Ohio communities were represented.

The increase of harmony and co-operation between employers and workers was stressed by Governor Myers V. Cooper and other speakers.

KILLED BY TRAIN

CLEVELAND, Sept. 2.—A middle-aged woman who was instantly killed by a speeding passenger train here last night, was identified at County Morgue today as Mrs. Anna Krsink, 37, of Cleveland. The woman is said to have stood calmly on the track and waited for the train to strike her. Police, however, reported her death as accidental.

THREE PERSONS ARE INJURED IN TRIPLE COLLISION ON PIKE

Three persons, two women and one man, were injured, none seriously, in a triple automobile collision on the Columbus Pike near Wilberforce, three miles east of Xenia, Monday afternoon.

A punctured wound of the left shoulder was sustained by Robert Frank, 25, of Rochester, Mich., driver of a small roadster which was reported to have sideswiped two cars traveling west on the highway. Mrs. A. L. Kline, Pittsburgh, Pa., suffered severe cuts above and below the left eye from flying glass, and Mrs. Charles Olinhausen, Columbus, received a severe scalp wound.

The crash victims were removed, one in the J. H. Whitmer undertaker ambulance, to McAlleister Hospital where it was said, after physicians had administered medical treatment, all the injured would be able to leave the hospital Tuesday. Frank left the hospital Tuesday.

The two injured women were occupants of the same machine, which also contained their husbands and other relatives, while two other occupants of Frank's car were unhurt.

SCHOOLGIRL, 13, GAINS 21 POUNDS; KONJOLA DID IT

Mother Pays Grateful Tribute To New Medicine: "Wish Other Mothers To Know," She Says

"Konjola is indeed a medicine for all the family," said Mrs. Mary Reed, 214 Wade Street, Cincinnati, mother of Miss Emma Million. "My daughter, Emma, was weak and did not play like other children. She was bilious, her eyes were dull, and she suffered intensely from constipation. Her kidneys were weak and her liver sluggish. She was often taken ill at school and lost much time from her studies.

"Emma gained 21 pounds since I began giving her Konjola. It has been eighteen months since I gave her this medicine and she is in perfect health today. She began to improve rapidly with the treatment. Constipation disappeared, she was no longer bilious, and she began to romp and play as a healthy child should. The weak fainting spells soon passed and her eyes began to sparkle with health. Konjola will always have a place in my home."

The wonderful works of Konjola are not restricted to any age. It may be taken by young or old with similar results. A trial of from six to eight weeks is recommended for the best results.

Konjola is a new and different medicine of 32 ingredients, 22 of them the juices of roots and herbs long known for their medicinal value. Konjola works quickly and thoroughly at the very root, the fount of the life of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, and of rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness. Konjola is not designed to give mere temporary relief, but to bring new, glorious and lasting health.

Konjola is sold in Xenia, Ohio at the Gallaher Drug Store and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

HAPPY DAYS GONE

SCHOOL days are here again. It is estimated that more than 2,000 pupils of Xenia's public schools returned to their study books Tuesday morning at the re-convening of schools for the fall term, bringing to an end the summer vacation period which lasted three months.

St. Bridget Parochial school pupils will not return to school, however, until Monday, September 8.

AMERICA'S DIET CHANGING

Physical Exertion Indicator To Food Variety

The amount of physical activity is an index to the variety of food to be eaten. To retain youth's figure and equanimity, eat only what is earned by physical exertion.

This message has been so often repeated to the American public that it has actually changed the diet of the country.

"Menus are being planned, especially for those who do not consume much physical energy. In contrast to heavy, rich foods, fattening for those not burning the energy produced, the country is now using more fruits, vegetables, and dairy products."

"The long drawn out dinners of grandmother's day with their heavy puddings, intricate sauces and heavily spiced meats are quite definitely in the background. Spending the whole evening at the table eating is as old fashioned as the stage coach."

"It is my belief that we are now eating to live instead of living to eat."

"This change in diet has resulted in two things: greater consumption of fruits, vegetables and dairy products and a greater necessity for refrigeration."

"Chilled salads, dainty desserts and crisp vegetables, included in this new diet, must be kept cold. The cold, dry temperature must be maintained at all times for many foods are extremely perishable."

"The quality and preservation of food in storage and in transportation is safeguarded by the government, but when it gets to the ultimate consumer, in most cases, it is left entirely to chance."

"The government is highly interested in the production of milk. Bulletins have been issued by the United States Department of Agriculture stating that milk, to be kept fresh, must be properly refrigerated at a temperature below fifty degrees. At a higher temperature, bacteria will multiply rapidly and spoil the milk."

The following is a test conducted by the New York City Department of Health.

"Fifteen drops of grade A milk were obtained under the best possible conditions and were found to contain only 3000 bacteria. Within twenty-four hours, in a temperature of 50 degrees, the bacterial count became 11,500. When raised to sixty degrees, the bacterial count was 180,000 and at eighty-six degrees the count increased to 1,400,000,000."

"These figures mean a great deal, when it is remembered that the bacterial count in milk is the best single index of its general sanitary condition."

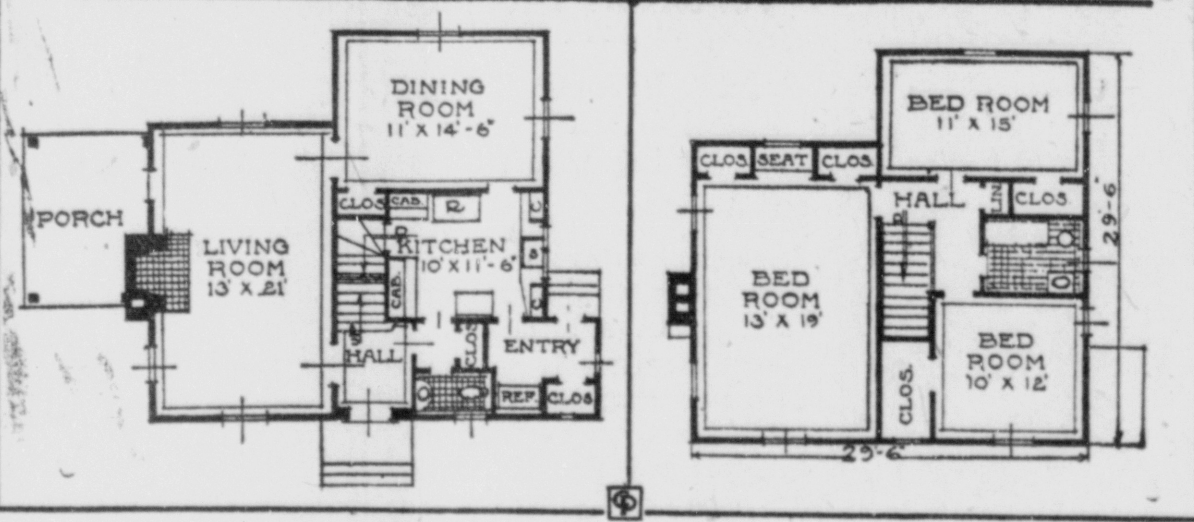

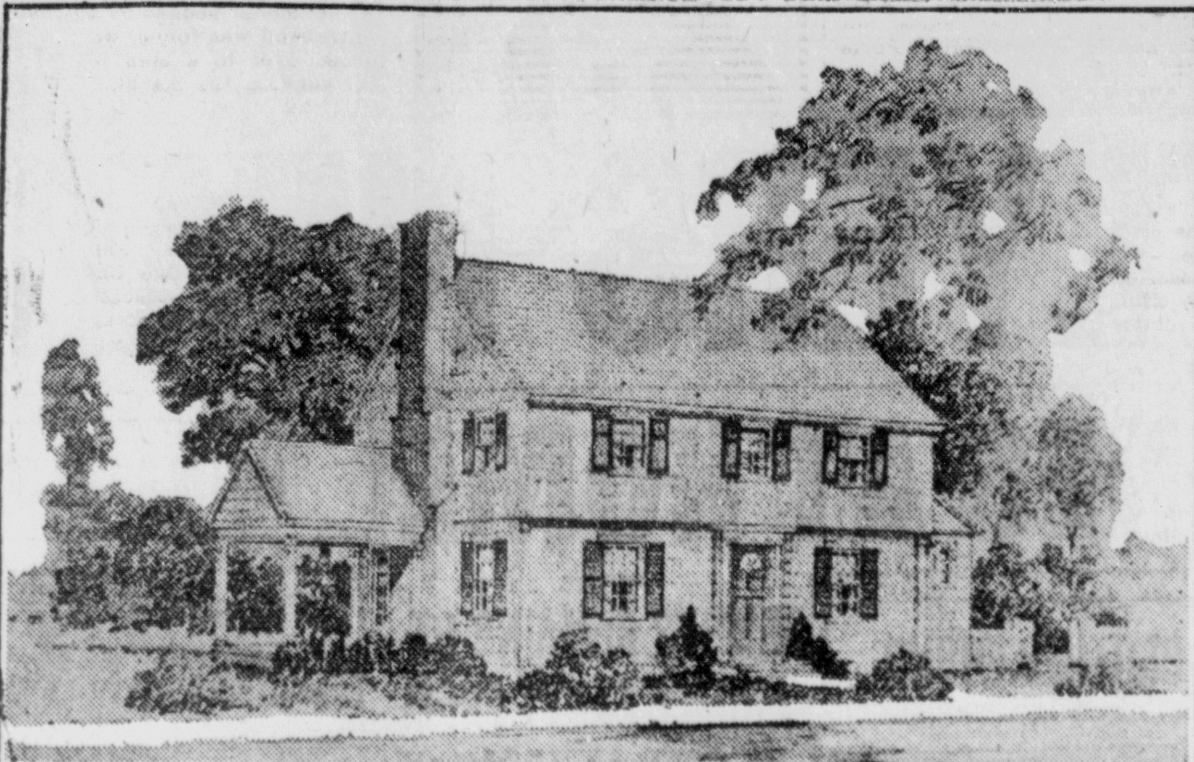

"The condition of the food we eat is concerning us more today than it was a few years ago. This fact may perhaps account for the tremendous acceptance of household electric refrigerators. As a means of keeping foods crisp and fresh, a modern electric refrigerator cannot be equalled. Not only will it keep food fresh and in safe condition for the table, but it places a large variety of new and appetizing frozen desserts at one's command."

ENDS LIFE MONDAY WITH PISTOL SHOT; BLAME ILL HEALTH

Suicide, due to despondency because of ill health, was the verdict of Coroner R. L. Haines, Jamestown, following his investigation into the death of Abraham Miller, 14, who fired a bullet from a .38 caliber revolver through his right temple in his bedroom at the home of his brother, J. H. Miller on a farm on the Osborn-Dayton Road, west of Osborn at 7:30 A. M. Monday.

Members of the family informed Coroner Haines the aged man had previously made threats to commit suicide. They said he had been suffering from a stomach disorder and that he complained of being ill when he arose Monday morning.

Declaring "severely mind" when the family offered to fix him a dose of soda, Miller returned to his bedroom, seated himself on the floor against a wall, propped a blanket back of his head and fired a bullet through his head from a revolver the family did not know he possessed, the coroner was told.

The shot awakened his brother, who was asleep in an adjoining room, but the man had died instantly.

He is survived by three brothers, J. H. Miller, Dan Miller and Ruben Miller, and two sisters, Mrs. Barbara Myers, Dayton, and Mrs. J. C. Lessel, New Carlisle, O.

Funeral services will be conducted at the Morris and Sons funeral home at Osborn Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment will be made in the Mennonite Cemetery at Osborn.

Country Club Members Enjoy Holiday

Bridge, luncheon, croquet and a golf tournament were on the program for members of the Xenia Country Club for the Labor Day holiday, Monday. Ninety guests were present for the luncheon which was served on the porch of the club house. Large bouquets of brightly colored autumn flowers were used to make the porch and the rooms of the club house attractive.

Following luncheon several members enjoyed bridge and croquet. A blind par tournament, with par at 79, was played during the afternoon. Six golfers were able to turn in a score of 79. An informal time was enjoyed during the remainder of the day at the club house.

O. H. Hale was general chairman of the luncheon and was assisted by Mrs. J. H. Whitmer, Mrs. W. Crawford Craig, Mrs. R. D. Adair, Mrs. A. C. Messenger, Miss Helen Little, Miss Doris Flynn, Miss Barbara Little and Miss Eleanor McKay.

SUPPER AND BRIDGE ENJOYED MONDAY

The Misses Lucy Stout and Marjorie Hook entertained a group of their friends at a covered dish supper at the home of the former on Hill St., Monday evening. Following the supper, bridge was enjoyed during the remainder of the evening.

Those present were the Misses Frances Marshall, Jean Marshall, Helen Currie, Doris McCormick, Betty Kingsbury, Elizabeth Irwin, Dorothy Neeld, Dora Hayward, Lucy Stout and Marjorie Hook.

FINAL DANCE ON FRIDAY EVENING

The final dance of the season to be sponsored by Bob Adair-Lee Little and Their Orchestra, also known as "Two Musical Kings and Their Eight Dukes" will be given Friday evening at Kil Kare Park.

A large crowd is anticipated as this is the final dance of the summer and many novelty features are being arranged by the band.

Queen St., this city, was fined $300 and costs by Municipal Judge E. Dawson Smith Tuesday morning.

Mitchell entered a guilty plea to a charge of possessing liquor and was committed to jail to work out the heavy assessment. The auto, an old model sedan, in which the contraband was found, was ordered turned over to a man who had a mortgage on the machine.

Mitchell's wife, Lillian, 28, was seated alone in the car when officers searched the auto but was released from custody when her husband walked into police headquarters and exonerated her. As a result, when Mrs. Mitchell Tuesday, a charge of possessing liquor, which had been lodged against her, was dismissed by the court.

FOUR PLEAD GUILTY Fines aggregating $90 and costs were imposed by Judge Smith Tuesday on four persons who pleaded guilty to intoxication.

Joseph Kearney, 44, drew a fine of $50 and costs and was sent to jail for non-payment of the assessment.

Levi Hipshire, 21, this city, who staggered into police headquarters to complain about someone else being intoxicated and was himself locked up on a charge of drunkenness, was fined $10 and costs and committed to jail in default of payment.

Sherman Carnes, 32, of 214 S. Galloway St., was also sent to jail when he was unable to pay a fine of $10 and costs.

A fine of $10 and costs was imposed upon Eber Pettiford, 25, colored, Yellow Springs, who was arrested at Church and Columbus Sts.

BOYS CONFINED

Four boys, all 16 years of age, arrested for loitering in the rear of the Bijou Theater Monday night, were locked up in cells at police headquarters over night and were still confined Tuesday because police say they created a disturbance all night, even refusing to quiet down when Night Desk Sergeant H. L. Karch turned out the lights.

FORFEITS BOND

Falling to appear in Municipal Court Tuesday morning to answer to a reckless driving charge, Lloyd J. Heaton, 21, Erie, Pa., whose auto, driven at a high rate of speed, is alleged to have turned a corner and barely missed colliding with a police car occupied by three patrolmen Saturday night, forfeited $5 appearance bond which he furnished when arrested.

ALFRED D. CRISTE, FORMER XENIAN, IS REMOVED BY DEATH

Alfred D. Criste, 67, former Xenian, died Tuesday morning at his home in Cincinnati, according to information received here by relatives.

He had not been well for more than two years but details of his fatal illness were not learned. Mr. Criste retired two years ago as Pennsylvania Railroad storekeeper at Pendleton Shops, Cincinnati.

He was connected with the railroad in Xenia before being transferred to Cincinnati many years ago and was a member of the organization composed of veteran employees. His first wife, who was before marriage Miss Winifred Higgins, died in 1913 and two children, Mrs. Marie Spies, Lancaster, and Sister Mary Christina, who died in August, 1929, preceded him in death. He is survived by his second wife, who was formerly Miss Katherine Kilduff of Cincinnati and by two daughters, Mrs. Albert Fox of Lancaster and Sister Mary Josephine of the convent of the Sisters of Mercy, Cincinnati.

He also leaves a sister, Mrs. Josephine Powers, at Creason, Pa.

Mr. Criste was well known here, especially through his connection with the Pennsylvania Railroad. He was a member of St. Stephen's Catholic Church, Cincinnati, where funeral services will be held Friday morning at 9 o'clock.

was a member of St. Stephen's Catholic Church, Cincinnati, where funeral services will be held Friday morning at 9 o'clock.

PLEADS NOT GUILTY WHEN ARRAIGNED AS "HIT-SKIP" DRIVER

Pleading not guilty to a reckless driving charge when arraigned before probate Judge S. C. Wright Tuesday morning, Charles Ellison, 22, alleged "hit-and-run" driver, was remanded to the county jail in default of $100 bond to await a hearing assigned for 1 o'clock Thursday afternoon.

The affidavit against Ellison was filed by Sherman Cotton, living a mile and a half northwest of Cedarville, in connection with an auto collision in Cedarville about midnight last Friday in which Cotton and his family narrowly escaped injury.

Ellison was later identified as the driver of the auto which is said to have been driven on without stopping after colliding with the Cotton auto, which upset and was badly damaged. Ellison's machine was afterward discovered in a ditch along the Tarbox Road, off the Columbus Pike, and the driver was taken into custody Saturday morning in Xenia, by police.

Ellison's father, John, Cedarville, is at present in the county jail serving out a fine of $100 and costs imposed in Municipal Court on a liquor possession charge.

RETURNS TO DESK

Michael E. Graham, former chief of police, resumed his duties as day desk sergeant at police headquarters Tuesday after an absence of five weeks. The veteran police official was confined to his home by illness for three weeks but now believes himself on the road to better health, although still somewhat weak.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

USE OR LOSE — Whosoever hath, to him shall be given, and he shall have more abundance; but whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken away even that he hath. — Matthew 13:12.

LAWLESS AMERICA

George W. Wickersham, head of the president's law enforcement commission, recently made some remarks on the unwillingness of the American people to obey the laws. His commission will in due time make some suggestions.

Meanwhile we all know about how far the laws will go, if people do not feel like obeying them, and if no effort is made to enforce them. You may post a perfectly reasonable notice on every road in Ohio fixing speed limits for automobiles. But if no one is brought into court for violating that notice, almost anyone who desires to travel at a faster rate will do so.

One may deplore this tendency and say that people ought to obey the laws. Yet they have always had this strong tendency. They seem to have inherited it from the days when the English government tried to order them around. When they began to tax tea and other things, the independent minded colonists threw the tea into Boston harbor. Their descendants are still active.

So we have a mountain of laws that are not well obeyed. The majority are good and useful laws, and would improve things if they were adhered to. But our independent people often refuse to consider what would be for the good of the community. They claim to know better than the lawmakers as to what is good for them. They do as they like until some officer comes around and invites them to interview the judge. After which their views frequently change. And of course legislators are human and often pass laws that are wrong and can never be enforced.

Two things are necessary to make the law respected. First, make it so just and reasonable that rational people will see its fairness and respect it. Second, insist that public officers and police officials enforce the laws to the limit of their ability, and if they are unable to do so, let someone else try it.

STATES VS NATION

The states of our union were earnestly advised by Charles E. Hughes, former secretary of state, to resist encroachment by the national government on their authority. This raises the question, which has always caused controversy, as to how far the states should have the right of local self government and management of their own affairs.

There have been many demands to have the federal government handle problems where it is claimed that state authority is inadequate. It is often argued that the states are not powerful enough to promote the progress of needed social reforms.

Progressive people have seen various good causes going ahead slowly under state government. They have argued that the strong central power at Washington could get useful things done, where if these things are left to 48 different state governments, the movement would be neglected in many of them.

Against this idea is the fact that the federal government has too many things to look after now. Congress is so burdened with its work, that each year it can act on only a small part of the problems presented to it. The citizens of various states may present serious grievances, but congress may not get around to take any action.

The state governments are different. If they fail to remedy the grievances of their people, the state capital is close at hand. The citizens get busy and they control the action of their legislature. In a country of 48 different states, where ideas and conditions differ radically, different arrangements must often be made.

There are many questions which the federal government is forced to handle, because the states are not able to cope with them. But taking a problem out of the control of a state, and giving it over to the remote and less accessible federal government, may do more harm than good.

The WAY of the WORLD

By GROVE PATTERSON

WHAT IS AGE?

It's more fun to go sailing through the sky at 72 than to be laid on the shelf. So says Dr. Elwood Mead, commissioner of reclamation, who will supervise the great Boulder dam project on the Colorado river. Dr. Mead will sail over the chasm in a balloon and make final notations for the project. It must be great to be 72 and going as strong as ever. This man supervised the installation of Australia's irrigation system. He has served as reclamation adviser to many governments. The refusal to recognize age is probably the greatest factor in keeping young.

PUBLIC OPINION

People read billboards and cheap fiction magazines too much and newspapers not enough. They read too many books that are trash and not enough books that seek to explain life, people and events. Pollard, governor of Virginia, speaking at the University of Virginia Institute of Public Affairs, tells his hearers that the future of democracy depends largely on the steady growth of an informed public opinion, based on facts and not on prejudices as to both measures and men.

The habit of reading newspapers will bring about an informed public opinion. Without an informed public opinion there is little hope.

LUXURIES AND WARS

Nobody is much impressed when Dean Inge says Americans spend enough for luxuries in two years to pay the British war debt. What if they do? Happy is the nation that has more money to spend for luxuries than for war. Let's see that we always do have.

WOMEN AND STAMPS

Martha Washington's face has been taken off the four-cent stamp and that of William Howard Taft put on. Women write to Washington, vigorously protesting. Only two other women ever had their faces on stamps—Isabelle, Queen of Spain, whose face adorned a stamp issued in 1893 and Pocahontas in 1907. After all, that's very little to worry about.

LIVING WORDS

The National congress of India adopts a declaration of independence which uses much of the American Declaration of Independence, word for word. Who says words don't count, don't live, don't serve for all time? Uttered in a righteous cause they survive kingdoms.

THE QUESTION BOX

CENTRAL PRESS WASHINGTON BUREAU

Answers to questions of information and fact can be obtained by writing to Central Press Bureau, P. O. Box 128 Washington, D. C., and enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope. No answers will be given to marital, medical or legal questions.

Is John Held, Jr., the artist, a son of Anna Held, the famous actress?

No. They are not related.

Wehre does Berton Braley, the poet and author, reside? Berton Braley is now living at South Norwalk, Conn.

Work in South America

Please inform me how to obtain employment in South America? You should communicate with the oil, fruit, tea and coffee, mining and steamship companies which have operations there and employ persons for the kind of work you seek.

State of Franklin

Was there ever a state in the United States named Franklin? Yes. The state of Franklin was originally the name of what is now Tennessee.

World War Poster

During the World War there was a poster used by the Red Cross entitled "The Greatest Mother of All." Can you tell me whether this was an actual photograph and if so, of whom?

The war poster you referred to was an actual photograph of Marguerite Fontaine, singer.

Egyptian Pyramids

How were the pyramids of Egypt built when even the present day lifting machinery is inadequate to lift stones of the weight found in some of them?

This question has puzzled many generations. As no records have been left to prove how they were built, it is only a matter of conjecture. The weight of authority is that the stones were dragged up long incline planes by hundreds and thousands of slaves belonging to the Pharaohs.

Telephoning Ships

Is it possible to telephone to ships at sea?

Yes. The Leviathan has had a ship to shore radio telephone service for about one year. Other installations have followed.

Greatest Engineering Feat

What is regarded as America's greatest engineering project?

Your question is controversial. Many regard the construction of the Hudson tubes under the Hudson river at New York City, as having been the greatest engineering project up to that time. The credit for this project belongs to William Gibbs McAdoo, former secretary of the treasury. These tubes were followed by those of the Pennsylvania railroad and the New York-New Jersey vehicular tunnel.

Tallest Building

Is the Woolworth building the tallest one in the world?

No. There are two buildings in New York much higher, the Chrysler and the Bank of Manhattan. The Empire State building, now being constructed in New York will be approximately 1,300 feet above the street. An observation gallery will be constructed almost a quarter of a mile above the first story.

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK. — The young men in the cigarette ads had better take a little time off and devote it to a study of Emily Post.

I encountered one of them on the rear piazza of a smokes magazine—nice chap, who smokes the same brand I do; but very ill bred. His hostess extends a cigarette case.

"Have a 'Smellycero,' she says. "Thank you, no," the young man replies. "I smoke 'Unfortunates.'"

MOVIE MANNERS

Speaking of breeding, there's a dinner scene in the film, "Raffles." A woman retires to the drawing room leaving the men with their cigars. Ronald Colman, playing the role of the Gentleman Cracksman, arises with the others, bows to his hostess and the instant she passes, cut across the bow of the next woman in line without even a hint of an apology.

I saw the picture with Longacre Lil. She turned to me: "Isn't that bad taste?" she inquired.

"It may be bad taste," Lil. I replied, "but after all, who there put in Hollywood to wise them up, except Elinor Glyn?"

WASHINGTON—Many people have the idea that a progressive Republican really is a Democrat—or just a bad—or good—depending on the politics of the individual harboring the idea.

It would clarify matters if this mistake were corrected.

There are stand-pat and progressive Democrats. A stand-pat Republican may consider the stand-pat Democratic crowd safer folk to associate with than his progressive fellow Republicans. A progressive Democrat may like his progressive Republican acquaintances' views better than his affiliated stand-pat Democrats.

Nevertheless, a line of cleavage runs all the way through, between the two parties.

UNDOUBTEDLY great numbers of Americans cast votes and even hold high offices, as Republicans or Democrats, without any actual thought of this cleavage, but simply because of some inherited preference, or for geographical reasons, or purely by accident.

A few of the intelligentsia, however, know the difference.

James A. Reed, when in the senate, fought the Republican organization bitterly, but he always showed a high regard and a deep respect for the G. O. P. progressive group, and I rather got the impression that he classed them as belonging, in effect, to his own party—until, one day, I happened to be interviewing him. He had been giving the Republicans hell in Columbia, yet I imagined he did not mean to include the insurgent element.

Finally I asked him—"How about the Republican progressives?" "Honest men on the wrong side," he answered promptly.

ON THE OTHER HAND:

Senator George H. Moses is as ultra a stand-patter as the G. O. P. has in the upper house of congress. Senator George W. Norris is the progressive leader.

For all that, Moses, as Republican senatorial campaign chairman is positively embarrassing in his determination to aid "Uncle George" in this year's fight in Nebraska. Norris evidently wants no such help, probably fearing it will hurt him with Nebraska's progressive voters. His Democratic rival, ex-Senator Hitchcock, is free from a lot of the heresies at which Moses shudders in Norris. Never mind—Norris, basically, is a Republican, and when it comes to a showdown between a Republican and a Democrat, Moses is for the former.

TRUE, President Hoover (if his spokesmen interpret him correctly) is cool toward Senator Norris. But old guard Republicans were free to assert, before the Kansas City convention (they ceased to do begins by saying: "Do you ever run across Eddie, or Tommy, or Bobby any more...")

It isn't at all unpleasant. Nothing could ever be unpleasant in Cavanagh's. A cozy, comfortable air pervades the place—a mellow atmosphere of well-being—the accumulation of decades. The old timers who dine there, and the proprietors seem to have entered into a jovial conspiracy to frustrate the Thieving Years.

Old Father Time has taken to cutting across the street when he comes to Cavanagh's, and passing on the other side.

so immediately after the nomination there), that Mr. Hoover's G. O. P. principles were not founded on rock.

Besides, if the White House continues balky in the Norris matter, it threatens to create an awkward situation, for most of the Republican higher-ups seem resolved to stand by "Uncle George" anyway—as witness Senator Moses' attitude. Also Senator Capper's, whose Topeka capital has declared the Nebraska progressive's re-election "of the utmost importance to the people of his state and the country as well."

THE LATE VICTOR BERGER, while a representative from Wisconsin, unquestionably furnished the most illuminating explanation ever given of Republican progressivism's relationship to the total bulk of Republicanism.

"It is the elephant's tail," said the Milwaukee socialist, "—a sore tail and it makes the elephant sore, yet an integral part of the elephant."

In his own party primaries the elephant may be exceedingly anxious to have the soreness nominally out of his caudal supplement.

Peter's Adventures

By Mrs. Florence Smith Vincent

THE THREE WHO BORROWED TROUBLE

THE ANTS were warm and weary. Their dusk coats were covered with dust. And at first sight Peter judged they were not in good temper.

"Thank goodness we are back at last!" grumbled one of them, crossly. "I can't understand why we had to move so far away. A spot nearer the old home would have been just as good as the one chosen. That's the trouble with our surveys. When they go searching for a location they never stop to think of the distance. What a walk we've had!"

The worst is yet to come!" sighed the grumbling ant's companion. "We crawled back home with our claws empty. The return trip will seem twice as far when we have to make it bearing the eggs to our new quarters."

A third Ant-voice took up the complaint. "And as if all this were not bad enough, we have moved so far away from our old home that we shall be worrying always about our dairy, wondering if it is safe or if barnyard has come to it. The chances are that our fine herd of cows will be stolen by an enemy tribe if we leave them unprotected. And I should like to know how we can spare enough guards to protect them by night and by day as they must be protected if nothing is to happen. Yes, mam, hark my words! We shall have to spend a lot of time and take a heap of trouble to find new stock unless we can coax our old cows into new pastures. And you know as well as I do, sisters, once our cows become used to certain feeding grounds they hate to leave them."

"Dear me, I never thought of that," wailed the two other Ants in chorus. That certainly means more hard work for us—laying paths, cutting weeds, herding the cattle!"

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

MENU HINT

Barbecue Steak Sandwiches
Potato Chips Sliced Tomatoes
Celery
Watermelon Coconut Cup Cakes
Coffee Lemonade

Outdoor cooking is very fascinating, especially in the early fall. Try this menu cooked in an outdoor oven or over coals of a bonfire.

Today's Recipes

Barbecue Steak Sandwiches—Four or five pounds pot roast or sirloin steak, one pound sliced bacon, two and one-half dozen buns, one-half pound butter. Have steak cut in suitable pieces for buns. Split and butter buns. (Amounts given serve ten.) When the fire has ceased to blaze, leaving a good bed of red coals, fry bacon in a frying pan. Remove from pan and keep warm. Now have bacon fat sizzling hot and sear each piece of steak quickly on each side. Then lay steaks on grill and broil, turn frequently and sprinkle with salt. Sear in the hot fat before broiling prevents juice dripping out. When done to your liking put in between split buns with a slice of bacon and a spoonful of barbecue sauce.

Barbecue Sauce—One-half cup butter, two onions, chopped, two green peppers, chopped, one cup tomato sauce, one teaspoon salt. Sauté onions and pepper in butter till onions are yellow. Add other ingredients are bring to a boil. Serve hot or cold.

Suggestions
Macaroni Products

Macaroni products are made of farina and contain a high percentage of gluten. They furnish in abundance the proteins or repair materials which counteract the wear and tear of work and play, and mineral salts on which depend the quality of the blood, the beat of the heart and the ready response of nerves and muscles to every impulse.

They contain magnesium, phosphorus, potassium, chlorine and sulphur. There's calcium, sodium and iron present as well. And though these impressive names may have little technical meaning to the homemaker their presence or lack of it in the diet of her children may mean the difference between robust and joyous health and that passive state which is neither sickness nor health.

The wheaty goodness of macaroni combines with meats, fish, shellfish, cheese, eggs, nuts, mushrooms or vegetables into "one-dish meals," which provide well-balanced menus with the least possible time spent in the kitchen.

Macaroni, spaghetti, elbow macaroni or egg noodles may be used as a change from potatoes, wherever the latter would fit in—creamed, fried, plain with butter or gravy, or in salad. There is literally no end of uses of this adaptable food.

Let Doctor Test Ears Of Pupils

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Next to vision, hearing is the most important thing to measure for the school child.

Just as in the case of defective vision, defective hearing may go unrecognized, and this situation leads to the belief that the child is mentally incompetent.

One of the commonest causes of defective hearing is a simple thing—the plugging up of the external ear canal with wax. It is surprising how often this goes unsuspected for a long time and leads to a considerable amount of disability. Removal of the wax is, of course, relatively easy, though it should always be done by a physician, who knows the anatomy of the external ear canal and will avoid injuring the ear-drum. As a well known New York specialist used to say, the only thing it is safe for a person to put in his own right ear, is his left elbow.

The essential test of hearing is the ordinary speaking voice. A child who can hear an ordinarily spoken voice at six feet is fit to be taught in an average class. Acute hearing of course, is much better than that. If the child can only hear distinctly at three feet, it should be put on the front benches or in a special class.

The watch test should be made on every class, using the same watch for each child. A watch of average loudness should be heard at a distance of about four feet. The best way of testing is to use a stop watch and make the child say when it is shut off. If a stop watch is not available, an ordinary watch held close to the ear, and then moved slowly away can be used. The child is told to say "stop" when it can no longer hear the ticking of the watch.

The most serious thing about the ears, short of total deafness, is pus discharge. This is also one of the most serious physical conditions of the whole body. It may not, however, be accompanied by any deafness whatever.

Discharge from the ear means, of course, inflammation of the middle ear with perforation of the ear drum. Its great danger consists in the possibility that the infection will spread from the middle ear to the mastoids, and even from the mastoids to the brain, causing a brain abscess.

Every child with either an intermittent or continuous discharge from the middle ear, should be under the care of a competent physician. The most likely cause of the condition is an infection of the throat, the tonsils, or especially the adenoids. An infected adenoid will lie over the opening of the Eustachian tube which goes from the throat to the middle ear, and continuously re-infect the middle ear. After its removal this danger ceases.

So They Do Get Over It In Time?

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

ANXIOUS: Dear, you are only a little girl, and I certainly can't advise you to take a stand against your mother. She is trying to protect you until you are older. You think now that your mother should not talk to the boys that she allows you to go out with—lecture them, you say. Well, wait until you are your mother's age and have a girl of your own, and see if you won't feel the same way about your girl.

As to the smoking, I agree with your married sister. Why do it just because those you go with do, especially when your mother does not want you to? Why not show them that you can be different? Your mother probably does many things for you, doesn't she? Why not try to please her?

Here's one "for the book," boys.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: Recently there have been a great many letters in your column about 'unkissable' girls and 'unkissable' boys. I am just turned 17, and I have yet to come across one of the latter. I don't pretend to know whose fault it is, but I know I've never known a boy my age who was above kissing. They certainly are all alike."

"Our crowd is not a 'fast' one, either. I have never been allowed to go out with a boy, and the other girls I go with have parents who are just as strict as mine—and the boys too. I don't know where they get the idea that girls are for nothing but petting. Every time they see a dark corner or a sofa or a girl they begin to get mushy. They are horribly insistent too, even though they know the girls don't like it."

"At a recent party (a well-chaperoned one, too), the host and a couple of others deliberately blew a fuse in the cellar so that there was no light at all downstairs."

"Each time that I meet a new boy I hope he'll be decent, and very true I'm disappointed. I know lots and lots of decent fellows around 25, which is the age of my older sister (who is to be married this fall). I honestly don't believe that anyone short of that age is anything but a girl chaser and a cheap petter! Even my sister thinks they're pretty bad, and she's had lots of experience, at least lots more than I."

"Anyway, I'm perfectly disgusted and I hope that next year college will be different. Not that I want any of that silly 'just chums' business, but I think there ought to be a happy medium. However, from my experience, so far, I probably shall find it."

"COMPLETELY DISILLUSIONED: So they DO get over it in time, do they? Well, that, at least, is encouraging, isn't it? And 'just chums' is foolish too! Well, well, and well as someone has said."

Maybe each of those "mushy" boys thought that if he didn't neck each time he got a chance he'd hear some girl with whom he wanted to make a hit, say: "Gee, that kid's slow! Spent a whole evening with him and he never kissed me once!" How about that angle?

M. A. S. also thinks that "Smiles" and his girl friend may safely marry and be happy if they will consult the pastor of the girl's parish. She thinks, however, that the children will all have to be Catholics, which, of course, would have to be agreed upon beforehand.

LOST TRUE BLUE PAL: If you can't even remember what you said to offend the boy friend, I don't think it can be very dreadful, dear? Touchy, wasn't he? It seems to me that after acting like that he is the one who should apologize, not you. If, however, that kid's slow! You said something you shouldn't or that might have been misinterpreted, why write him a note and tell him so and that you are sorry. And if he continues grouchy about it, don't worry about the matter. It's just plain silliness.

SAD GIRL: Nothing to be done except to wait until you get a chance to talk to the boy you like, that he will find you irresistible and ask for your company.

Employ Expert Aid For Beauty

By GLADYS GLAD

In yesterday's article I attempted to show you the importance of employing a skilled, well-trained surgeon in having your face lifted. In other branches of plastic surgery, it is equally important that the surgeon be an expert.

Plastic surgery deals with the building up of bony, fatty and muscular tissues. In most cases, the surgeon either has to remove tissues or replace them by the injection of foreign matter.

In a great many instances in the past, paraffin was the chief substance used to remodel the nose and fill out hollows. And age the results were satisfactory. But they were not permanent. Sooner or later, the paraffin would melt down in little droplets, giving the face a queer, bumpy appearance. Or it would slip out of place and serious irritation to the surrounding tissue would result. An operation would then be necessary to remove the paraffin from the tissues.

Bone-grafting is now the preferred method of reshaping the nose. This is much safer and more permanent than the paraffin method. A screen actress, for example, had her nose remodeled with a piece of cartilage that had been removed from her ear. The number of screen contracts which she has been offered testify to the success of the operation.

One of the most difficult operations in plastic surgery is the removal of fat. Another screen actress had pounds of excess tissue removed from her hips and legs a few years ago by means of plastic surgery. But many of the best surgeons refuse to undertake such operations, claiming that they are both dangerous and ineffective. The fat that is removed comes back almost immediately.

Every operation incurs a certain amount of risk. But the employment of a competent, skilled surgeon will eliminate half the danger.

All-Star Victory Evens Series With Langs

SUBDUE CHAMPIONS 7 TO 3 IN LABOR DAY POST-SEASON GAME

Winners Play Snappy
Ball; Huge Crowd
Sees Contest

Coming back triumphantly after their indifferent exhibition in the opener, the All Stars squared the post-season softball series with the champion Lang Chevrolet Co. by winning the second installment, 7 to 3, before another overflow crowd at Cox Field Monday night.

Manager Arnold Boxwell revamped his starting lineup slightly for the second series game, putting Dick Murrell on first base and "Skipper" Findlay on second, and both players delivered with two hits apiece.

Langs also introduced a number of changes from their regular starting lineup.

The hits were evenly divided, each team getting nine bingles, but the All-Stars on this occasion showed better judgment in cashing in on their opportunities.

John Hurley rejoined Langs and started on the mound for the city champs. He pitched hitless ball for the first three innings but in the fourth the All-Stars broke through the Lang defense to score three runs.

With one down, LeSourd walked, Yeakley was safe on an error and then came successive singles by Kersey, Murrell and Finlay.

The winners added two more counters in the fifth when Smith walked and Gene Leakey hit a home run to left. The sixth inning saw the All-Stars produce their final two runs when with two down, Leopold singled and Frame tripled, the latter scoring on an error.

Gibney went in to pitch for Langs in the seventh and although he released three hits he escaped being scored on in the two innings he worked.

Langs scored their first run in the opening inning when Lee Ruse smacked a homer to left center.

They scored again in the seventh on Patterson's single and a three-bagger by Gibney and marked up their third and final run in the ninth on an error on Patterson's grounder and singles by Corr and Gibney.

Ruse, Patterson and Gibney each obtained two hits for Langs.

Gene Leakey was singled in a collision with Bill LeSourd in the seventh inning, the two coming to springing in going after Ruse's fly to deep short. Leakey was reported to have suffered a fractured nose.

Frame pitched for the winners, after their indifferent exhibition.

With each team having one victory to its credit in the series, the third meeting between the two teams will take place Tuesday night at 6:15 o'clock.

The net proceeds from the Labor Day series tilt amounted to $31, which fell somewhat short of the gate receipts, for the opening series game last Friday. Lineups:

The Flyer coaching staff headed by Baujan, former Notre Dame star, is one of the finest ever to coach the Dayton football machine.

Baujan enters upon his eighth year of coaching at Dayton. His efforts have been rewarded with unusual success and Flyer followers are looking to him for a winning outfit again this fall.

Jack Koester, former Michigan and Brown star halfback, who coached at Steele High School in Dayton for several years after leaving Brown, was added to the coaching staff late last spring. He is a splendid student of the game and will make a valuable addition to the coaching staff.

Bill Belanich was named assistant coach in mid-season last year upon the resignation of George Fitzpatrick, now deceased. Belanich was captain of the Flyers in 1926 and was an outstanding tackle in his varsity days. He will continue to guide this year's team.

Charlie Baumann, former Flyer quarterback, was recently named freshman coach.

There will be a new champion crowned in the 1930 President's Cup Tournament, at the Xenia Country Club.

There was much certain Labor Day when Dr. H. L. Sayre eliminated Bob Shoup, youthful defending champion, 2 up and 1 to play in a second round eighteen-hole match. By virtue of his victory over the 1929 title-holder, Dr. Sayre progressed to the semi-finals of the tourney.

In the consolation "Brown Derby" tourney for the sixteen golfers who failed to qualify for the President's Cup match play, three first round matches were played off Monday. Charles Darlington beat Henry Flynn, 3 and 2; Leon Spahr defeated Ralph Hall, 7 and 6 in a 36-hole match; and Millen Davidson eliminated Charles Fisher, 5 and 3. Spahr and Hall were even at the end of eighteen holes and decided to play two more rounds.

Oliver Harner, S. Columbus St. white, who is alleged to have driven his automobile into the side of a Pennsylvania freight train standing on the Columbus St. crossing at 11 o'clock Monday night, was fined $100 and costs, sentenced to thirty days in jail and had his driving rights suspended for six months by Municipal Judge E. Dawson Smith Tuesday morning.

Harner pleaded guilty to a charge of operating an auto while intoxicated. He was driving south and the front end of his car was smashed in as a result of the collision with the train.

Fred Hilliard, Jamestown Pike, white, who was an occupant of Harner's machine, was arrested by police on an intoxication charge and was fined $10 and costs by Judge Smith.

Harner and Hilliard were unhurt in the collision.

Business men affiliated with the Xenia Retail Merchants' Association will be the guests of the Hibbert Theaters, Inc., newly formed local corporation, at 6 o'clock banquet at the Elks' Club Wednesday night. The corporation is sponsoring the construction of a new playhouse and commercial building on a site recently acquired at 42-44 W. Main St.

Plans for the annual picnic and outing of the Greene County Fish and Game Protective Association will be formulated at a meeting of sportsmen in the basement of the Court House at 8 o'clock Wednesday according to Raymond Wolf, secretary of the association, who urges a full attendance. A date for the yearly all-day frolic is expected to be set at this meeting.

PHILLIE FANS LIKE LOSER

Shotton's Last Placers Out-Draw World Champs;
Burt Is Praised

By DAVIS J. WALSH
I. N. S. Sports Writer
PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 2.—

There seems to be something about a winner that enrages this town out of all reason and, on the other hand, it apparently can learn to love a loser in a very big way.

Anyhow, one story here today is that the Philadelphia Athletics, champions of the world, are experiencing something of the same situation that confronted them back in 1914 when everybody stayed away from the ballpark very reluctantly.

Another is that the Phillies, having won forty-three out of 130 games for a natty 331 are disposed to go along with Mr. Burt Shotton under whose auspices this most dubious of records has been sponsored.

Ordinarily, one might look for Mr. Shotton to hit the asphalt on the first bounce, particularly in view of the fact that many deemed him to have started the season with a potential first division club.

In this connection, it might also be mentioned that he is laboring in the interests of W. F. Baker, who like Sam Bredon never waits until he sees the whites of their eyes before firing. He has been known to fire without seeing any club. His tolerance in the case of Mr. Shotton would be surprising.

If it wasn't for the fact that everything about Mr. Shotton is surprising, He is one of the most successful failures known to baseball.

The mugs in the stand are for him and greet his every appearance with the silence of profound respect. His players are for him. So, it seems, is Mr. Baker. He has two of the hitting leaders of his league in Klein and O'Doul, two good infielders in Whitney and Thevenow and the unfortunate reputation of being a good ball club that cannot win. What it happens to be in a very pool ball club that gives an impression to which it isn't at all entitled.

It hits above .300 as a club but does most of its hitting after the ball game is lost beyond recall. It has no pitchers. Two of its infielders are playing on the dime that Mr. Baker gave them as a token of his esteem. The outfield, if not defensively impossible, is at least highly improbable. The club, in spite of its punch, is so slow that it hits into more double plays than any other in the major leagues.

However, whatever it is, the club is Mr. Shotton's own and, as such, it is something to be moderately proud of. They gave him nothing to manage three years ago. He has been managing it with intelligence, if not success, ever since. He has made a lot of trades and none of them has been bad. This is the first of two things he has made on behalf of his owner, the other being money. Whatever else they are, the Phillies at least are an interesting outfit.

They are so interesting, in fact, that they had more paid attendance than the world's champion Athletics during recent home stands of the two local clubs. The champions, it appears, are being taken pretty much for granted here, just as the last winning club Connie Mack had back in 1914 was ignored because it won too much. On that occasion, Mr. Mack had to sell his stars to get even. I don't say the same condition exists today but, according to the local version, if the owners are staying awake at night it isn't to gloat over the box office figures.

The club, in spite of its punch, is so slow that it hits into more double plays than any other in the major leagues.

However, whatever it is, the club is Mr. Shotton's own and, as such, it is something to be moderately proud of. They gave him nothing to manage three years ago. He has been managing it with intelligence, if not success, ever since. He has made a lot of trades and none of them has been bad. This is the first of two things he has made on behalf of his owner, the other being money. Whatever else they are, the Phillies at least are an interesting outfit.

They are so interesting, in fact, that they had more paid attendance than the world's champion Athletics during recent home stands of the two local clubs. The champions, it appears, are being taken pretty much for granted here, just as the last winning club Connie Mack had back in 1914 was ignored because it won too much. On that occasion, Mr. Mack had to sell his stars to get even. I don't say the same condition exists today but, according to the local version, if the owners are staying awake at night it isn't to gloat over the box office figures.

It hits above .300 as a club but does most of its hitting after the ball game is lost beyond recall. It has no pitchers. Two of its infielders are playing on the dime that Mr. Baker gave them as a token of his esteem. The outfield, if not defensively impossible, is at least highly improbable. FATHER OF XENIAN CALLED BY DEATH

Funeral services were held in Indianapolis Monday afternoon for Frank Huston, 71, father of Ward M. Huston, N. Galloway St., this city. Mr. Huston's death occurred Saturday after an illness of a week from heart trouble.

Mr. Huston is survived by three children: Ward M. Doughty, Glen-city, Mrs. Emmett Doughty, Glen-city, Calif., and Mrs. Albert Muster, Shirley, Ind. His wife preceded him in death a number of years. Burial was made in Indianapolis.

Mr. and Mrs. Ward Huston and two children attended the services Monday.

PUTT-PUTT-PUTT

The two surviving entrants in the miniature golf endurance contest being staged at the Old Mill Camp links at Cedarville, entered upon their eighth consecutive day of continuous play Tuesday, each vowing to keep going indefinitely. One of the boys is said to have suggested that they compromise and split first prize but the offer was not accepted and both youths—Robert Hopkins and Howard Freed, of Jamestown—are now determined to be the last to quit.

FLASH She Swims to Conquer

By Eleanore Burnett

Copyright, 1930, by Central Press Association, Inc.

READ THIS FIRST:

Kitty Wilmont, secretary to Elery Goss, assists Gordon Platt, Goss' confidential man, with whom she is daily falling in love, in running down a "leak" in the office; Altee Goss' chief clerk, asks her to marry him. She does not accept. After meeting Boss Kelliher at a party given by Hilda, phone operator, she is later accosted by him, and he asks her to work for him at a thousand dollars a month.

Next day in East Side Natatorium she defeats a professional swimmer in an impromptu race, but is shocked when Platt tells her a gambler, Tom Gayle, won a five thousand dollar bet on her and indignantly rejects money Gayle offers her through Platt.

Wanting to help Platt, but not ready to tell all she knows of Altee, Kitty asks help of Spike Harden, who suggests a private detective agency, where she is shocked to find Gayle, the gambler who bet on her, in charge. But she is happy to learn that Platt returned his money, and falls asleep that night dreaming of the kiss Platt never tried to give her.

Her home-town lover, John Spurgeon, arrives unexpectedly in New York; Kitty stages a party for him with friends; she sees Platt, who cuts her dead.

Tormented by jealousy she speaks to Platt as she dances by him; he denies his own name.

She refuses a proposal from John. Next day Platt tells her he was doing secret work and did not want the suspect to know his name; Kitty hears for the first time of Gila Mine stock. Taking important dictation from Goss, she learns that Spurgeon is investing in Gila Mine, which she knows will drop, and resolves to help him, secretly.

To get money to help him she swims as a professional and wins. She persuades Fatty Hemming, stock broker, to sell Gila stock for her, the same stock John has bought.

Kitty gets Hemming to pretend to John that her winnings are his, made on the stock market, in a restaurant she overhears a suspicious conversation between Baby and an unknown man.

Obsessed by thoughts that she had lowered herself by swimming as a professional, she resolved to resign.

She confesses all to Gordon Platt, sure that he will turn her from his words of scorn.

Gordon praises her loyalty and asks her to marry him.

CHAPTER 34

The next week Kitty looked back upon as a dream of paradise.

Mr. Goss called her into his office the next afternoon and told her not to report to the office again for a week under any circumstances. He didn't say why; he said it rudely; he appeared disgruntled.

But Kitty caught a twinkle in his fishy cold eye.

She went home, certain of the source of that unexpected week's leave. Nor was she surprised to find a bunch of roses and a card reading: "At six."

It was the beginning of a week of expeditions; of long rides; of happy little dinners at secluded roadside inns; of precious hours of intimate conversation in which for the first time she learned something of the man she was to marry.

Gordon Platt, it appeared, was the son of a rather poor New England people; an old, proud, poverty stricken family. He was one of six children and as soon as possible, he removed to the city to make one less mouth for the ancient farm to feed.

He secured a job as office boy in a Wall Street firm graduated to runner, then to a desk, and had rapidly worked his way up.

Finally he had attracted the notice of Mr. Goss, scorned his offers until they reached a very large size, then had become a partner and finally a full partner. His forte, it appears was organization making arrangements, planning out the details of the schemes and plans Mr. Goss formulated. He did not tell Kitty how much money he had, and it never occurred to her to ask. Obviously he had plenty.

Only one matter lay heavily upon her heart. "Do you think any of my friends is implicated in this leak?" she asked him towards the end of their first evening together.

"I don't know," he answered. "It's all so intangible. But if you are willing to keep our engagement a secret a little while I propose to find out!"

"Oh, I—I don't want to tell it," cried Kitty, momentarily

MISS ELIZABETH CRAWFORD CALLED

Miss Elizabeth Crawford, 78, died at 4:30 o'clock Monday afternoon at the home of her sister, Mrs. C. F. Hagler, Wilmington Pike.

Miss Crawford was born near Xenia, August 18, 1852 and spent her girlhood days in the Old Town Run neighborhood. She attended the old Xenia Seminary on E. Church St. and also spent a number of years as a mission teacher in Wynnewood, Okla. Her health failing, she went to California for a time, returning to Xenia in August, 1926, and since that time had been making her home with her sister, Mrs. Hagler.

Miss Crawford leaves two sisters, Mrs. Hagler, with whom she lived, and Mrs. J. H. Lackey, near Jamestown. Another sister, Emma, and a brother, James A., preceded her in death.

She was a life-long member of the First U. P. Church, Xenia, where funeral services will be conducted at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon with interment in Woodland Cemetery.

Poems that Live

DUNA

When I was a little lad
With folly on my lips,
Fain was I for journeying
All the seas in ships.
But now across the southern swell,
Every dawn I hear
The little streams of Duna
Running clear.

When I was a young man,
Before my beard was gray,
All to ships and sailormen
I gave my heart away.
But I'm weary of the sea-wind,
I'm weary of the foam,
And the little stars of Duna
Call me home.

National Farm Outlook

By ARTHUR H. JENKINS
Editor, The Farm Journal
Written for Central Press

Enough words have been written and spoken on the subject of wheat in the last few weeks, to keep the country supplied with language for years ahead.

I have contributed my share, and have no desire to add further to the output. But there are two or three circumstances of the wheat situation that have not, as far as I know, received very much public notice.

The first of these is the fact that the Grain Corporation, the big co-operative selling concern promoted by the Federal Farm board, is now completely established as a sales agency. Relations with the big flour mill buyers have been established, and the mills are buying co-operative wheat in fair quantities.

There is, you must realize, a great deal of "trading" in wheat. That is what the futures markets of the grain exchanges are for. But every bushel of actual wheat must be sold to some flour mill, here or in foreign countries.

Thus in addition to its selling efforts right here in the United States, the Grain Corporation has now opened offices in the principal grain centers of foreign countries, in beginning to sell wheat direct to anyone who will buy it.

Farming never has, in all its history had any such machinery for selling its grain. And while much wheat will certainly continue to go through the usual private trade channels, the co-operative wheat will, I expect, make a secure place for itself in all markets.

Other aspects of the wheat situation are not so promising, at this moment.

For one thing, few people realize that our capacity for wheat production is enormous. We now grow from 500,000,000 to 900,000,000 bushels of the grain, of all kinds, and that is a lot of wheat. But we could add another four hundred million bushels to that, or double it, just as easily.

In one particular section, the Panhandle country of Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas and Colorado—an area as large as all of Ohio—we could raise the whole 600,000,000 bushels that our population now eats.

This is an encouraging outlook for the bread-eater, but not so good for the wheat grower. It means that wheat production will surely continue on a competitive price basis. The farmer who cannot grow cheap wheat may just as well get out of this business or at least not depend on it to furnish much of his cash income.

The Theater

Chester Morris, who began talkie life as a "heavy" as a result of his remarkably fine performance in the crime picture, "Alibi," is to be made over into a leading man. No more will Chester play the heavy who loses the girl at the end of the film. Roland West, who has the young actor under contract, is authority for the statement, the decision coming as the result of many letters from women fans urging that Chester be given heroic roles.

West has bought a story, "False Dawn," from Arden Combs, in which Chester will be featured as the lover. West will not direct the picture himself, since he has de-ers have to don black-face make-up for the "Amos 'n' Andy" picture, "Check and Double-check." This is done because they have to photograph a uniform brown.

Paramount has signed Charles Rogers to a new contract as another indication of this young man's success. Rogers has made nine talking pictures and his personal appearances in the East drew flappers by the thousands. It was at the insistence of fans that his nickname "Buddy" was dropped from his billings.

The veteran stage actor, Joseph Cawthorn, has been signed by Fox to play the plumber in the forthcoming talkie, "The Princess and the Plumber." Maureen O'Sullivan will play opposite Charles Farrell in this film. It was first believed that Janet Gaynor, who has made her peace with Fox, would be put into the role.

Mr. Arthur Kany, who is employed in the offices of the Dayton Speedwell Automobile Co., is enjoying a short vacation at his home here. On Monday he will go to Indianapolis to attend the auto races. Miss Mabel Graham left for Frankfort, O., where she has accepted a position as assistant principal in the high school there.

Miss Jessa J. Pearson has been re-appointed a member of the Board of County School Examiners. Return McClellan is in Cincinnati attending the tennis tournament.

ided upon "Death Takes a Holiday" for the next United Artists picture. Chester is to have the lead in this, too, but the stage play will be changed to make "Death," the leading character, attractive instead of unpleasant. Morris' whole expression is being changed by the addition of a mustache, which he will probably continue to wear.

There was an impromptu memorial to Lon Chaney at a Hollywood night stadium the other night. It started when the announcer called attention to the vacant ring-side seat which the actor regularly occupied during his life. With all the lights out Alan Hale climbed into the ring, illuminated his face with a flashlight, and recited a poem in memory of his friend.

Though production is slack at Warner Brothers, the company is buying stories for next year's program. Latest to be purchased is "God's Gift to Women," from the typewriter of Frederick Hazlitt Brennan. As the hero is a small town slicker with a gift for gab, there seems reason to suspect that Grant Withers may get the role. The author is the son of a Missouri minister and, until a few years ago, was a St. Louis newspaperman. He has been a steady contributor of late to the Saturday Evening Post.

for actually making the attempt. Present plans are for the Question Mark to land at the Curtiss airport in Valleystream, Long Island, N. Y. Later Coste and Bellonte expect to continue to Dallas, Tex., thus completing a trip entitling them to the collection of a $25,000 prize offered by Colonel William E. Easterwood of that city.

The successful completion of the flight from Paris to New York direct would materialize an aviation dream for which half a dozen gallant men already have sacrificed their lives. Outstanding on the roster of these heroes, perhaps, are the names of ill-fated Charles Nungesser and Francois Coll, who set the example that initiated other attempts to negotiate flights from east-to-west in one jump, as Colonel Charles Lindbergh in his hop from New York to Paris.

One by one these courageous aviators stepped into their machines to follow the path of Nungesser and Coll, disappearing like a vanishing speck over the Atlantic wastes, never to be heard of again. The very hazard and difficulty of the flight, therefore, spurred Coste and Bellonte all the more in a determined attempt to unfurl the tricolor over Manhattan a day after leaving the spires of Paris in their wake.

The seagull plane Question Mark, an air veteran tested in every conceivable manner and under all sorts of climate and atmospheric conditions, was fueled for a cruising radius of more than 5,000 miles and powered with a new Hispano-Suiza type motor capable of an 150-mile-an-hour speed.

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—Speeding down the Atlantic seaboard on the "home stretch" in their spectacular nonstop flight from Paris to New York, Captain Dreuodonne Coste, famous French flier, and his companion, Maurice Bellonte, are facing less favorable conditions after experiencing "providential" weather all the way across the ocean. But even so the weather ahead of them, is not such as to cause any alarm.

Dr. James H. Kimball, United States weather bureau meteorologist in New York, told International News Service today that the crimson seagull plane, "Question Mark," would encounter "cloudy weather the rest of the way with the possibility of light rains and fog." Heavy cloud banks were reported from Eastport, Maine, to Highland light but it was believed that the foggy conditions would "burn off" before afternoon.

"They'll make it," was the confident expression in aeronautical circles after Coste and Bellonte had accomplished more than two-thirds of the flight and were still traveling at a speed estimated at over 100 miles an hour. They had spanned the Atlantic, heading in toward the Atlantic seaboard as they passed close to Cape Race.

Dr. Kimball pored over a huge map, changing details and positions, as information came to him reporting the progress of Coste and Bellonte. He seemed optimistic over the successful culmination of this hazardous east-to-west arduous flight that brought death and disaster to so many other courageous airmen.

"Coste enjoyed providential weather across the ocean," said Dr. Kimball. "He made remarkable speed because the winds were behind him most of the way. I figure that he arrived off Cape Race about 6 o'clock this morning and that he is now coming in down along the Atlantic seaboard."

"The cloudy, foggy weather ahead should not defeat them in their efforts to make New York. They have plenty of flying radius left. When they were in the vicinity of Cape Race they were out only about thirty hours and they have a capacity of sixty hours flying. Their flight across the Atlantic, at a speed of over 100 miles an hour, is remarkable—as remarkable as any of the flights over the ocean from west to east."

Officials at Curtiss field were preparing, meanwhile, for the arrival of the intrepid Frenchmen. The airport's huge floodlight will be turned on when darkness descends. Special police precautions have been made to handle the huge crowd that is expected to converge on the field from all directions late this afternoon.

Attends School
Every Day Now

"My daughter Kathleen is fifteen years old. For three years she had suffered with pains as so many young girls do. One day we saw an advertisement of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the San Antonio Evening News. I bought a bottle and it helped her so much that she has been taking it regularly and is now completely relieved and able to attend school every day."—Mrs. Victor H. LOSES HIS SHOES

FRED "Bulldog" Smith, star third-baseman for the All-Stars softball team, is bemoaning the loss of a perfectly good pair of spiked shoes. Fred had the shoes at the athletic field Monday night during the second game of the Lang Chevrolet series and left them beneath a bench. After the game, when he went to get them, they had disappeared. The third-sacker is hoping the shoes will re-appear in time for the game Tuesday night.

CENTRAL HIGH REST ROOMS RENOVATED; P. T. A. CREDITED

The teachers' rest room and the room used as the boys' rest room and Cen Sen room at Central High School have recently been renovated and refurnished by the executive committee of Central High P. T. A., composed of Mrs. Charles Adair, president, Mrs. J. H. Benbow, Mrs. L. S. Hyman, Mrs. P. C. Bankard, Mrs. J. J. Stout, Mrs. George Baldwin and Mrs. Howard Lighthiser.

The floors in both rooms were re-painted and new rugs were bought for the boys' room. The furniture has been repainted in an attractive shade of green and was re-upholstered by Mrs. B. U. Bell and Mrs. Lighthiser. New draperies were made by Mrs. O. C. Custer and now the rooms present an attractive appearance.

Two pictures of the late Miss Mae Harper, one of the best beloved teachers at Central High, were enlarged and one was placed on the table in the teachers' rest room and the other hung on the wall in the Junior High boys' study room.

Members of the board of education and school officials expressed their gratitude to the P. T. A. for its work in brightening the two rooms.

was believed that of Strindberg, while the bones were the remains of Frankel.

After a close inspection of the Andree camp as he found it, Dr. Horn concluded that the explorers after safely landing in their balloon, were unable to endure for long the rigors of the vicious Arctic climate. Exhaustion, he believed, ended their sufferings within a few weeks. This was attested to by the fact that numerous shells remained untouched, showing that the explorers found little opportunity to hunt game. White Island offers bear, fox and grouse. not only the icepacked bodies but also various camp implements which were dug out of the ice there the last camp had sheltered the explorers. Among these were the Andree sledge, rifles and tent stakes. In the ship's safe was locked away the brittle diary of Andree, in whose pages Dr. Horn hopes to discover the entire thrilling account of the expedition from the day it left Spitzbergen to within a few days of Andree's death.

Three metal-lined pine chests were ready here to receive the bodies when the Bratvaag dropped anchor. Expert embalmers and refrigerators were waiting to take care of the remains. Andree's log-book and diary, Dr. Horn said, would be turned over to scientists for preservation.

On revelation by Dr. Horn that he believed the Andree camping spot on White Island still had much to offer in the way of relics, the Norwegian government radioed the steamship Isbjorn to turn back on its course to Tromsø and make a thorough search of the location.

The Isbjorn originally left Norwegian shores some days ago to search for the Bratvaag after learning of Dr. Horn's discovery. It failed to contact with the sealing vessel, as did a number of other vessels bent on similar mission. The ship carried a number of newspaper correspondents.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—Possibility that the log which was painstakingly kept by the explorer Auguste Salomon Andree on his balloon venture to the north pole may supersede the widely-heralded diary in importance and richness of content was offered today in a report to the London Times by its Skjervoy correspondent.

First examination, the report stated, revealed to the delight of its discoverers that the Andree's observation log contained several hundred pages of the Swedish explorer's easily readable handwriting. These timely and detailed entries, it was indicated may unfold a story far more complete and dramatic than the small, ice-cracked diary which was kept by Andree.

The log was found in the small canvas boat which was recovered by Dr. Horn, while the diary rested in Andree's vest pocket and consequently suffered more from exposure than the log. The latter, according to the Times, may tell the graphic story of a 200-mile march over treacherous ice and snow which was endured by Andree and his men in a heroic attempt to fight their way out of the barren north towards civilization.

Line by line, page after page, will follow the record by day and hour of Andree's expedition, in the belief of the Times correspondent, who viewed the document. It was held quite probable that every major incident of the trip from the first to the last would be found faithfully recorded by the careful and methodical hand of Andree.

Those who discovered the log and permitted themselves a cursory glimpse over some of its pages intimated that even as death faced his party, Andree round occasion to make light of their fate. In one of the entries written into the log, he was reported to have jokingly dwelled on plans for his next balloon expedition with a bigger and better balloon.

The log, it was believed, along with the diary, will be turned over to scientists for preservation and reading.

Bargains for Banquets

Where popular demand reduces prices

"One policy of your company which gives me the greatest satisfaction," writes an A&P customer, "is that you do not take advantage of a special demand for a product to profiteer."

"For example, on the third of last July my A&P store sold good quality watermelons from 25c to 55c below other stores in town. A&P, realizing that many people enjoy a nice melon for Fourth of July picnics, put them within reach of everyone."

A&P believes in making it as easy as possible for people to get what they want when they want it most. That is why A&P provides special bargains in fruits and vegetables at the height of their season, in turkeys at Thanksgiving and Christmas, in delicacies during the Holidays, and in eggs at Easter.

The usual custom is to charge a little more when people for one reason or another are pretty sure to buy anyhow. A&P thinks these are just the times to make the cost of high living as low as possible.

Guide Posts to Value

AT THE top of old Dorfchenberg, not far from the black forest, there is a wilderness of pines where forty-one trails converge. Even experienced hikers were helpless in the maze of paths until kindly peasants carefully marked each trail with a stone guide.

Through the maze of modern products advertisements guide you straight to merchandise of full value. Advertisements save your money by indicating worthy goods. Advertised products do not vary in quality. Ask for them by name.

Study the advertisements carefully and you will be repaid. Take notice of them and you can cut your budget. That means money for a growing savings account, a trim Parisien hat, or enough to repaint the kitchen. You will be surprised to find how that extra value in advertised products tucks away pennies in your purse. Advertised merchandise gives more value dollar for dollar. Advertisements are your guide to that increased value.
